MILLIONS OF BROWN TAILS PESTER BOSTON

Moth Army Comes Silently on a West Wind and Settles Down for Mischief.

The invasion of Boston by the brown-tail moths has come. On the wings of a west wind, following the shower of last night, they came in from the west in a cloud that looked like an early snow. Their white bodies and wings filled the air. They swarmed about the Common, the State House, Boylston street and Tremont.

At the Touraine they covered the two street sides until they were whitened. They covered the Pelham Building, across the street, dirted through screenless windows and took possession of offices. The Majestic Theatre and Union Institution for Savings Building, a little further toward Eliot street, looked white in color from the swarm of moths that settled on them. In the Common there were millions, and on the north side of the Common a few.

The plague of moths came in just the same way as the one of a year ago—on a west wind. Last year, before the moths had a chance to lay their eggs and die, multiplying their numbers a hundred and more for next spring's ravaging of the trees, an east wind blew them back whence they came.

If this is to happen again, the wind must soon come, for the days are not far distant when the female moths will lay their eggs—about 200 each—and then in the late Fall, when the caterpillars hatch out and begin building themselves Winter nests, there will be an immeasurable multitude of them for Boston to reckon with.

In Outlying Sections.

Not only the centre of Boston suffered. In outlying sections the wind also brought them. East Boston got so many when the wind came that it was almost impossible to see across Chelsea street. It was as though a driving snowstorm was raging. They came through Maverick square and settled on buildings, trees and poles, so that the air decreased. Meridian street was infested with them. After the wind had ceased they separated and spread over many parts of the island, swarming around the electric lights in every quarter.

The Entomological Commission is working hard these days. The gypsy moth has not retired from active business, but it is the brown-tail that is at its best. Practically all the moths flying in swarms about the lights evenings are brown-tails. Whatever they happen to settle on the days count when they lay their eggs and, having fulfilled their purpose in life, die, will later be the scene of battle between their progeny and the people for the preservation of the foliage.

As a natural result of the plague of moths, large numbers of people in Boston are suffering from the painful skin eruption known as "brown-tail moth itch," which follows the dropping upon the skin of any of the furry brown hairs that present such a pretty contrast to the general white of the insect.

The "Itch" No Joke.

This "itch" is no joke, as many thousands in Boston and the suburbs have learned. In West Newton, where the pest is most strongly intrenched, 100 cases have been reported as serious that the victims, with them, were unemployable and their eyes closed from the humor, had to go to the hospital. Scores of other less violent cases are reported daily.

People are not so likely to get the skin disease from the moths in the state in which they have now invaded the centre of the city as when they are caterpillars, especially in the days just before their development into moths, early in the Summer. Then they shed their hairs and anyone under a tree from which the microscopical hairs rain, dropping unnoticed, has a chance of needing the services of physician or druggist.

The plague to-day extends over an area of many miles in this vicinity. Malden, Melrose and Medford have long been a seething mass of the insects, and Chelsea, Lynn, Salem, Woburn, Stoneham, Cambridge and the suburbs are among the places they have overrun.

Superintendent Kirkland of the commission that is striving to exterminate the pests says the moths will probably remain as they are now for ten days, when they will lay their eggs and die. Then there will have just hatched from the caterpillars and they will spread the ugly rash of next season's brood on the leaves of trees.

The new Japanese flies, which have been imported as a parasite of the moth, are expected to lay their eggs on the leaves selected by the moth. When the flies' eggs hatch it is believed the young flies will eat the larvae of the brown-tail. This, however, is more or less of an experiment. While observing it the commission is not relaxing its efforts to put an end to the insects.

If a Brown-Tail Moth Stings You Use This

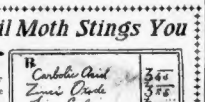
It is what they use for "Brown-Tail Moth Itch" at the Boston City Hospital. Dr. S. G. Underhill, executive assistant at the hospital, furnished it to the BOSTON AMERICAN for its readers.



It is a simple prescription. A druggist will probably charge about 25 cents for compounding it.

Do not compound it yourself. Do not fail to shake the bottle before using the remedy. Do not take it internally; it is a lotion, to be applied EXTERNALLY ONLY.

EAST WIND AND A COOL WAVE RELIEVE BOSTON

TEMPERATURE AT NOON TO-DAY 18 DEGREES LOWER THAN YESTERDAY.

NASH, GEORGE O., engineer, No. 136 Warren avenue—City Hospital.

PULLING, CLEMENT, mason, No. 21 Cogswell avenue, Cambridge—Cambridge City Hospital.

HAYES, D. J., forty-one years, No. 39 Roxbury street.

CRIPPS, GEORGE, twenty-seven years, No. 247 Roxbury street, Roxbury.

HOLLAND, EDWARD, forty years, No. 62 Greenwich street.

A blessed east wind, a drop of eighteen degrees in the noon temperature from that of yesterday noon and five cases of heat prostration—one causing a broken leg—tell Boston's weather story to-day.

The official temperature record for the city at noon, as given out from the weather bureau, was 74 degrees. Yesterday at noon it was 92 degrees. This difference means life to many. To-day would have been the "fatal third" of the hot spell, when humanity would have been so vitiated and debilitated by prolonged heat that it would not have been able to withstand a continuation of high temperature.

Two of the cases of heat prostration today are of men working in most unfavorable places. George O. Nash, twenty-three years old and living at No. 136 Warren avenue, was stricken while working as engineer in the engine room of the Hotel Somerset. He was removed to City Hospital.

Clement Pulling, a stone mason living at No. 21 Cogswell avenue, Cambridge, was overcome by heat while working in the sun on a new building at No. 2,024 Massachusetts avenue, North Cambridge. He fell to the ground and broke his left leg. He is in Cambridge City Hospital.

To-day's temperatures so far are: 4 a. m., 68; 6 a. m., 69; 8 a. m., 71; 9 a. m., 73; 10 a. m., 75.

Cool Winds Unite.

The reduction of eighteen degrees in temperature, compared with that of yesterday, is due to a combination of east wind blowing from off the water and a cool wave veering over this way from the Great Lakes. The great fog bank, which has been hanging off the North Atlantic coast for the past few days and keeping all the heated air from blowing away from the land, has lifted, adding to the favorable conditions.

From all these causes the United States Weather Bureau is able to give out to-day a forecast somewhat encouraging. The local forecast is:

It will be noticed that the official forecast does not state which way the temperature will change, but the lowering records easily show that this change is downward and therefore for the better.

In the general summary of prospects which the weather man gives out after his official forecast, this encouraging statement is made:

"The indications point that to-day will be ten degrees cooler." This is not official prophecy, however, just a hopeful "indication."

"For Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy to-night and Wednesday; light east to southerly winds. Slight changes in temperature."

TEMPERATURES TO-DAY.

| 4 a. m. | 68 |
| 6 a. m. | 69 |
| 8 a. m. | 71 |
| 9 a. m. | 73 |
| 10 a. m. | 75 |
| 11 a. m. | 73 |
| 12 Noon | 74 |

Humidity Is Normal.

The humidity is only 70 to-day, which is the normal mark, and much more endurable than the blistering, sweltering stickiness of the day before. One's clothes do not have such an all-pervading habit of clinging to the skin from the nape of the neck to the soles of the feet.

The lowest temperature during the night for Boston was 68 at 2 o'clock. At 7 o'clock to-day the highest temperature in the country was 84 at Key West. New York, Philadelphia and Washington were alike at 76. There is no rain in New England, and the thunderstorm of yesterday are followed to-day by fair weather all over the country.

The New England forecast is:

"Fair, [illegible] and cooler in Eastern Maine. Wednesday probably, followed by showers. Light easterly to southerly winds.

The weather man concludes his statement to-day with a prophecy that it will be generally cooler to-morrow.

At 7:45 o'clock to-day the first heat prostration was reported, and the victim is at the City Hospital in a serious condition. The man is George Nash, twenty-three years old, living at No. 136 Warren avenue. He was at work in the engine room of the Hotel Somerset when he was overcome.

Boston's record of 93 degrees yesterday made it the hottest July 10 since 1880, when the mercury reached 101 degrees. That was the highest ever. The thunderstorm which everyone hoped would cool the atmosphere did not make good, and the heat continued far into the night.

FATALITIES FROM LIGHTNING.

The thunderstorm which visited New England late in the afternoon was very severe. Lightning worked havoc with many buildings and the record of deaths and shocks is large. At Danversport a bolt entered a house and nearly wrecked the interior. At Danvers it broke a water main, ripped off a chimney, crippled the fire alarm and levelled a tree. At Gloucester it smashed the windows in one house, struck the Babson School and damaged a plane in another house. Bolts struck at Rockport, Lakeview and Wilmington, and in Beverly, Salem and Marlboro, damaging several buildings and shocking two women. At Salem several cows were killed.

The thunderstorm that passed over Boxford was very severe and a bolt of lightning instantly killed Miss Augusta Anderson, a maid in the employ of W. C.

MOSCOW POLICE PREFECT VICTIM OF PETITIONER

Three Bullets Fired Into Breast by Man Who Approached Him Under Guise of Seeking Favor—Assassin Is Arrested.

Special Cable to Boston American.

MOSCOW, July 11.—While receiving petitions, this morning, Major-General Count Shuvaloff, prefect of police here, and formerly attached to the Ministry of the Interior, was assassinated by one of the petitioners, who shot him dead.

The murderer, standing over the prostrate form of his victim, revolver in hand, was overwhelmed by the guards and borne struggling to prison.

The assassin was cool as he stepped up to the prefect and began to formulate his request. There was not the slightest intimation in his demeanor that he intended violence.

He had spoken only a few words when he thrust his hand into his breast and drew forth a revolver. Pointing the weapon full at the prefect's breast, he fired three times.

General Shuvaloff threw up his hands, groaned and fell headlong at his murderer's feet. The assassin then pointed the revolver at his victim's body again and would have shot a fourth time had he not been overwhelmed by the guards.

Pandemonium reigned in the petition hall after the murder. Overcome by excitement, the petitioners rushed about the place shouting imprecations. A crowd quickly gathered outside, but was dispersed by the police.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 11.—News of the assassination of Count Schuvaloff, prefect of Moscow, reached here this afternoon and revealed a great sensation.

Count Schuvaloff belonged to an aristocratic family and moved in the most exclusive Russian circles.

He was at the private friend of the Czar and of the grand dukes, and it is believed that it was because of his frequent relations with the grand dukes that he was killed.

Martial law has been proclaimed in the district of Tiflis, Caucasia.

180 REPORTED DEAD IN WELSH MINE DISASTER

EXPLOSION IN A COLLIERY AT PONTYPRIDD, GLAMORGANSHIRE.

LONDON, July 11.—An explosion has just occurred in the Wattstown colliery at Pontypridd, Wales.

In the mine at the time 180 men were at work. It is believed that all were either killed outright by the explosion or were afterward suffocated.

Pontypridd is a mining and manufacturing village in the county of Glamorgan, and is situated on the Taf River, near Lantwit.

EQUITABLE LOANED $250,000 TO DEPEW

SENATOR'S SECURITY ONLY $150,000; STARTLING DISCLOSURES AT INQUIRY.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Some of the testimony which was taken by Inspector Superintendent Hendricks, in his investigation of the affairs of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, has become public through being sent to certain members of the Assembly. It is far more startling than the statements made by members of the society's directorate than any which was previously allowed to get out from the office of Mr. Hendricks.

Chauncey Depew, President Alexander, James Hazen Hyde, William H. McIntyre, clerks, officials, trust company presidents and others gave testimony that is startling in many details. Jacob H. Schiff of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., confronted with the secretary's records that his firm had sold a large amount of Union Pacific preferred stock to the Equitable, promptly declared the record to be false.

Called Records False.

Mr. Schiff was insistent that his concern did not deal directly with the Equitable but that the records had been falsified if they showed such a thing.

Mr. Depew admitted being interested in the Depew Improvement Company. He admitted that this company had borrowed $250,000 from the Equitable Society, with which loan he said he had nothing more to do than to vote for it as a director, that it was on property which had been valued by the insurance department at only $100,000, that the concern had become bankrupt and the mortgage foreclosed.

Then came the admission from Mr. Depew that he had verbally guaranteed to save the Equitable from loss, but said that this promise was not legally binding.

Mr. Depew was prominent in the raising of salaries, according to his testimony. Young Mr. Hyde wanted a raise in salary. He wanted $100,000. Mr. Depew and another director were appointed to see about it. They raised the salary. They had to raise President Alexander's to a corresponding amount, because he was president. The reason he decided on the raise for young Mr. Hyde was for what his father did.

Depew's $20,000 Salary.

Mr. Depew was asked to explain what he did to earn the salary of $20,000 a year which had been paid him since 1889.

"Mr. Hyde, the elder, retained me as one of general counsel. He was constantly calling on me for advice. Then he wished to pay me so that he could have the privilege of calling on me at different times. Mr. Alexander said it was an advisable thing to do. Of course I never appeared in the courts. I advised largely in insurance."

James Hazen Hyde told the superintendent that the "James H. Hyde and Associates" were in eight syndicates that sold securities to the Equitable. In all of them he is aware that President Alexander was concerned. He said that there was $317,000 which he had paid back to the Equitable which had not yet reached the treasurer of the society, but was in the hands of a trustee.

He told the Equitable Society ever in any manner pay the expenses, or any part of the expenses, of the dinner tendered M. Cambon, late French minister to the United States? Mr. Hyde was asked.

To which he replied "Yes," and to another question said it cost about $12,000.

Dinner Was for Advertising.

It was purely an advertising affair and given because the society wanted to stand in the good graces of the French government, and as the minister could not be the guest of honor at a dinner given by an insurance company it had been given in his name and that of Mr. Depew.

"Of course, I didn't pay for it. It was a business dinner," said Mr. Hyde. "The French people are greatly flattered by such a dinner."

Mr. Hyde told of the large number of servants he had who were carried on the payrolls of the Equitable, which was justified in his opinion because they often did work for the society.

He told of the purchase of a private car which he used which was paid for with $20,000 of the society's funds. After two years usage Mr. Hyde said he paid the society $10,000 for the car which he considered right because it had been used two years.

Second Vice-President Tarbell wanted an increase in salary. He was then getting $50,000, and he thought he ought to have more, as he had to pay much for entertainment. Mr. Hyde was then acting president. He wrote to President Alexander, and when that official acquiesced Mr. Tarbell's salary was jumped up to $60,000. Mr. Alexander generally fixed the salaries, Mr. Hyde said.

Repayment Stopped on Way.

President Alexander, in his testimony, said he had paid back $40,000 to the society, profits which he had made in the

PEASANTS SEIZED ESTATE OF CZAR

WARSAW, July 11.—Two thousand peasants have seized the Czar's hunting grounds near Spala, Russian Poland, and declare they will hold the vast estate by force. The Czar has been notified of the seizure, and informed of the fact that if there are drives off there will be a general uprising of the peasants in the surrounding district.

As given by the peasants, the cause of the seizure is the magnificent grazing grounds for cattle which lie on it. It is a fact that more than 1,000 head have been turned loose on it and are ravaging the magnificent place.

PEASANTS REFUSE TO MOVE.

Immediately after news of the seizure had reached the municipal authorities, there was a concerted effort to drive the peasants away. They refused to go and threatened the local authorities. They have established quarters in some of the Czar's buildings, hitherto sacred to him, and are living on what they can find.

To one of the authorities, a peasant, who is a sort of leader of the men, declared their cattle were dying of starvation, and their position was an amusing and the supply allowed to go to ruin.

It is not known as whether troops will be sent to quell the disturbance. It seems certain that if they are, with the peasants in their present mood, there will be a great loss of life before the countrymen are willing to give up the estate.

MILLIONS SPENT ON ESTATE.

This estate is one of the largest and most beautiful of the many which the Czar holds all over Russia. Millions of dollars have been spent there, and the main hunting lodge, which is almost a castle, is a building which would enable the peasants to offer a stiff resistance to the soldiery if they took possession.

TROOPS TURN GUNS ON CZAR'S OFFICERS

LONDON, July 11.—Dispatches from Libau to the Morning Post declare that a firing party ordered out to shoot more than a score of men who were leaders of the recent mutiny at Libau, turned their rifles from the condemned men to the officers and fired, killing a dozen of the officers.

Instantly a party of Cossacks, which had been held in reserve, was ordered to charge the firing party and did so, with the result that a fierce pitched battle occurred. Thirty Cossacks were killed before the rebellious firing party was taken.

According to these dispatches twenty-three men were under sentence of death as a result of the recent outbreak at Libau. A half-dozen had been executed, when an increase in the mutiny induced the con-

Lane of Cambridge. The family and servants had recently moved to their Summer residence at Bedford. Miss Anderson was standing near an open door when the bolt struck, shattering the building. A nurse in an adjoining room was badly shocked.

Miss Anderson was thirty-three years old, a native of Sweden, and had been in this country but three months.

Boy Killed at Medway.

James Kyes, aged sixteen years, the son of H. A. Kyes of Revere, was struck by lightning and killed while walking on the street at Medway. He had been sent to Medway to work on a farm, for the benefit of his health. He was the oldest of four children. Another lad who was walking near him was badly affected by the bolt, but uninjured.

At the Rice & Hutchins shoe factory, in Marlboro, a bolt struck, and Miss Mary Heddy Brown was shocked and removed to her home in a dangerous condition.

At Gloucester an electric car on the Good Harbor Beach trestle was hit by lightning, which ran through the car and down into the sand below. The passengers were in a panic stricken, and Miss Elizabeth A. Hall jumped over the guard rail and fell on the beach, six feet below. She was not dangerously hurt. Several of the passengers received slight shocks.

Malden claims the record, unofficially, of being the hottest place in the country, for a thermometer there registered 103. Two men, Harry V. Fuller, a telephone inspector, and Andrew Murray, an express man, were overcome by the heat.

At Brookline there were two prostrations, James Brennan, aged 16, and Joseph Ryan, a newsboy. Several places of business closed earlier than usual.

At Haverhill the City Hall thermometer registered ninety-three in the shade and in the sun reached as high as 120.

The excursion boats in Boston Harbor did the record business of the season. Hundreds went on sailing trips and the beaches were overcrowded. At the close of 7 wharf at 3:55 p. m. a thermometer there registered 101.

A list of the hottest spots in Boston yesterday shows the following:

End of T wharf at 3:55 p. m.....100
Atlantic avenue, foot of Central street, at 3:40 p. m.....100
Atlantic avenue, foot of Oliver street, at 3:30 p. m.....98
Head of T wharf at 4 p. m.....98
Dewey square at 3:20 p. m.....98
North End Park at 4:15.....93
Maverick square, East Boston, at 4:15 p. m.....94
Scollay square, at 4:10 p. m.....94
At Park Street Church at 4:45 p. m.....96
Corner of Boylston and Tremont streets at 2 p. m.....99
Corner of Boylston and Washington streets, at 2:15 p. m.....97
Corner of Washington and School streets at 2:30 p. m.....94
Post Office square at 3 p. m.....92

The coolest place in all Boston, outside of an icehouse, was the East Boston tunnel, where, at 1:30 p. m., the mercury was down to 65 degrees. Here women in perforated waists and men in shirt sleeves shivered and hastened to put on their wraps. At the East Boston end of the tunnel, however, the temperature rose rapidly, and 88 degrees was the average for the day.

In the subway the highest temperature recorded was 88 degrees, and many persons rode back and forth for an hour or so, paying the extra nickels willingly for the sake of getting cooled off.

NINETEEN DEATHS FROM THE HEAT IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, July 11.—A day of terrific, overpowering heat, which rolled up an appalling list of dead and prostrated, was checked and temporarily cut for a time in the afternoon by a violent storm, which flooded relays, sewers and the subway and left a trail of disaster and ruin in its wake. At night it was again unbearably hot.

Nineteen persons, most of them children, were killed by the sun's merciless rays and stifling humidity before the powers were overcome, and at midnight new cases were still being reported. Realizing the serious problem confronting the city, Dr. Darlington, head of the New York Board of Health, issued a warning, telling how the fright-

STARTLING EQUITABLE REVELATIONS.

Chauncey M. Depew said that he voted as a director for a loan of $250,000 to the Depew Improvement Company, in which he was interested, although the State Insurance Department had appraised the company's valuation at only $150,000.

His salary of $20,000 a year was for "advice freely given." He voted with one other director to raise James Hazen Hyde's salary to $100,000 a year because of what the father had done. Young Mr. Hyde made the request for the raise.

JEROME AND MORSES NOW WORK AS ONE

After Being Pursued by District Attorney Couple Now Stand With Him in Fight.

WILL SOON LEAVE PARIS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Charles W. Morse and Mrs. Frederick Cowles, his wife in love and affection, but no man's wife in the eyes of the law, after being the principals in the famous Dodge-Morse case for a year and a half, hunted and pursued by the district attorney, to-day stand ready to testify as his chief witnesses in the further prosecution of the case against Abraham H. Hummel, Benjamin Steinhardt, his lawpartner, and Charles F. Dodge, her first husband.

This complete change of front on the part of Morse is only one of the startling new developments in the case, brought to light yesterday, when Hummel, Steinhardt and Dodge were arraigned on the new indictments for conspiracy secured by Jerome.

Morse and the woman around whom so much litigation has centred are both in Paris and while they are living at different hotels, they are spending most of their time together, and for the first time in a year there is a complete understanding between them. Morse has decided to dispense with his attorneys altogether and will follow the example of District Attorney Jerome.

Such a firm understanding exists between Morse and Jerome that the former will, on the receipt of a subpœnam, start for this city with Miss Cowles.

Nineteen Case Explained.

In his statement Mr. Morse makes clear his relations with Mr. Gelsheen, and what he says shows how absolutely unnecessary it was more than a year ago for Jerome to invade her home with detectives and refer to her as a fugitive from justice in a letter written by him. He also tells of the efforts he made to learn who was back of the case for months, and how he finally discovered it was his uncle, old Captain "Jim" Morse, who feared his children were not loved by the second Mrs. Morse.

The district attorney also has an outline of what "Mrs. Morse" can testify to. She will tell of the check which she received when the original letter from Howe & Hummel declaring that she had been divorced from Dodge was received by Mrs. Morse. She at first believed it was Dodge who began the proceedings, but she never could understand where he got the money.

She also will tell of the second check she received when she learned Captain "Jim" had started the proceedings, because he thought she had no love for his grandnephew and grandniece, little Anna Morse, and he will tell how she really loved the children.

Longs to Be Legally Wed.

But above all these things "Mrs. Morse" will tell how deeply she longs for the time when she again can be legally the wife of the man she loves, Charles W. Morse, and how she longs to have the children back with her in her old home on Fifth avenue.

It is rumored that when they return to this country, if not before, Morse and she will again go to the altar and be made one.

CAPTAIN MORSE AVOIDS TALK ON DODGE DIVORCE

RUTLAND, Vt., July 11.—Captain James T. Morse, whose nephew, Charles W. Morse, of New York, has become so well known on account of the complications arising from his marital experiences with the former wife of Charles F. Dodge, cheerfully owns up to having had a very pleasant trip from Boston in his automobile. When it comes to giving the slightest information regarding his part in the Morse-Dodge tangle, he insists that he is not at all interested in that matter and that he has absolutely nothing to say.

Captain Morse left Boston last Thursday in his automobile, accompanied by Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Harvey of Braintree and Miss M. M. Sanford, daughter of Charles Sanford of Boston. Captain Morse took no chauffeur, for he knows all about an automobile himself, and they came by way of Fitchburg and Bellows Falls.

NEW REVELATIONS IN THE EQUITABLE

syndicate graft. This had not yet reached the society's treasury, because it was held by Cashier Murray as trustee.

He paid back profits from two of the eight syndicates in which he was engaged. He qualified several directors, dummy directors, with his own stock.

Mr. Alexander went into exhaustive details on question as to his connection with the many syndicates and acknowledged that some of them had turned out badly. He said that he owned two millions of stock in the Union Pacific and as nearly as he could recollect it was purchased at different times under the order of Mr. Hyde. He said it was purchased from Kuhn, Loeb & Co., under some peculiar agreement.

Jacob Schiff's Story.

Jacob H. Schiff told how he had been a director for twelve years, but had only bought his shares of stock when the scandal broke loose. Until May he was a "dummy."

His concern, Kuhn, Loeb & Co., had done business with the Equitable, principally reselling securities which the Equitable had purchased from his firm. Its interest was limited to the sale of over a million in Japanese bonds which the Equitable had bought from Kuhn, Loeb & Co. at 85½ and interest and had sold at 91½ flat. In a few days after the sale the bonds had gone up to par.

Mr. Schiff insisted that his concern had never sold any Union Pacific preferred or any other stock to the Equitable. He was shown the record where $500,000 worth of this stock was authorized by the finance committee of the Equitable from Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

"The record must be false," said Mr. Schiff.

He was shown the record of its approval by the finance committee, of which he was a member.

"I never purchased the stock from Kuhn, Loeb & Co.," he replied.

He was told that the statement was also from his firm.

"The statement must be wrong," he said.

Shown Office Voucher.

"Here is the office voucher for 9,000 shares, purchased of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Union Pacific Preferred, holding certificate 9,000 at 100 $900,000. Paid June 16, 1905. That is the check of the Equitable Life paid for the purchase of $900,000 to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. for Union Pacific preferred holding certificate," was told Mr. Schiff.

"I can only say to you that whoever has furnished you that record or information of sales of Union Pacific or any other stock to the Equitable Life has furnished you with a false record," insisted the banker.

According to the testimony given by Valentine P. Snyder, president of the National Bank of Commerce and former president of the merged institution, the Southern National Bank, and as Equitable director, the Equitable holds four or five millions of Bank of Commerce stock.

Snyder was asked if the Equitable had not lost over a million by the merger. He replied that he couldn't figure it out that way.

Mr. Snyder said that on the five million which the Equitable had on deposit in his bank they were allowed two per cent. interest.

JEALOUSY OF HUSBAND AND WIFE IN FALL RIVER POISON MYSTERY

Investigation Expected to Involve City's Most Prominent People.

Bottle Sent to Boston for Analysis; Authorities Try to Keep the Details Secret.

Special to the Boston American.

FALL RIVER, July 11.—That the investigation by the Federal authorities into the circumstances surrounding the receiving of a bottle of malted milk believed to contain poison sufficient to kill several people will produce facts involving some of the wealthy and fashionable people of Fall River is the firm belief of those who are able to get near the inside history of the sensation that is to-day stirring the entire city.

Jealousy on the part of husband and wife is believed to be at the bottom of the attempted murder, although those who know the truth are keeping close counsel, and the name of the woman who received the poison package has not become positively known.

A man in the coterie of friends to whom the woman belongs said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day:

"Maybe you won't learn the entire facts for six months; maybe you never will."

Keeping Details Secret.

No pains are being spared to keep the details of the matter and the names of the principals from the public.

A story has been placed in circulation to the effect that a woman in fashionable life, desirous of attracting attention, or perhaps seeking sympathy, sent herself the poison bottle. This statement is not credited, and is believed by some to have come from those who might be involved in the sensation if the entire facts of the situation are ever made public.

What seemed to be the best authority to-day was responsible for the statement that not only were postoffice inspectors working upon the case, but that the bottle of malted milk had been sent to Boston for official analysis.

Eight or ten people in Fall River are believed to have possession of most of the facts of the case. The public or the police have learned only so much as these few have allowed to filter out.

Recalls Barnaby Case.

There are many resemblances between this case and the famous Barnaby case, which attracted the attention of the whole country fourteen years ago. Mrs. J. S. Barnaby, the wealthy widow of a Providence clothier, received a bottle of liquor while in Denver, marked, "From your friends in the woods." Believing it to have come from friends of a Summer camping excursion she drank a little of the liquor and died.

Dr. Graves, a prominent Providence physician, was arrested, tried in Denver, and sentenced to death for the murder. He cheated the gallows by suicide.

That you may know what it will do for you I send a sample for you to try

FINDS ORIGINAL OF PENN'S PATENT

LONDON, July 11.—An interesting American document has been discovered in England and is for sale. The document is the letters patent granted by Their Majesties William and Mary to William Penn. With several well-authenticated Penn heirlooms, the Penn patent has come upon the market through a chartered accountant, who found it in the household of an English family who were unconscious of its historical value.

LAWSON WILL SPEAK AGAIN; VOICE GOOD

Boston Man Recovers From Illness and Goes On With Campaign.

HE WILL TALK IN CHICAGO

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 11.—Thomas W. Lawson has been assured by Dr. Logan, the Kansas City throat specialist, that the infrared ray treatments that he believed he would be able to fulfil his engagements to speak at the other Western cities in which he is announced to appear.

Mr. Lawson left Kansas City at 5.30 o'clock for Fairbury, Neb., where he is to speak to-day.

During the day a large number of letters and telegrams inviting Mr. Lawson to speak at different places throughout the country were received, but none have been accepted aside from the one to address the Jefferson Club, of Chicago, Saturday, this being the only deviation from the itinerary announced before leaving Boston.

Given Bunch of Roses.

Just before the train left Kansas City Fred N. Tufts, secretary of the Knife and Fork Club, and a prominent business man, came to the car with a magnificent bouquet of roses which he presented to Mr. Lawson on behalf of the club before which he spoke last Friday evening.

Mr. Tufts handed a with the flowers a note which read as follows: "I am requested by our president to send you as a token of our appreciation these flowers. We take pleasure in bringing them in person. We of Kansas City sincerely hope your affliction is but for a moment."

This dispatch was received by Mr. Lawson from Rev. Dr. C. S. Nusbaum, secretary of the Kansas Christian Endeavor Chautauqua greatly disappointed in your absence yesterday and is merely pray for your recovery and ability to meet your other engagements. We believe in you and love you, and appreciate what you have done for the great Middle West in your coming to us."

Mr. Lawson this evening sent the following dispatch to the Jefferson Club of Chicago in accepting its invitation to dine on Saturday:

To Edgar L. Masters, Jefferson Club, Chicago:

Your kindly, generous invitation to dine with you received. Thank you. "System" already has my voice but am making heroic stand to save my hands. If successful, and your guests will be content with sign talk, will be pleased to dine with Jefferson Club Saturday night. Am scheduled to leave Chicago for home at 3.30 Saturday afternoon, but will change to midnight.

THOMAS W. LAWSON

One of the most interesting incidents of the entire trip so far occurred at Smithville, Mo., about one hour out from Kansas City, where the train stopped for ten minutes to wait for another train. The car was surrounded by a group of natives, all of them engaged or interested in raising horses or mules, and when Mr. Lawson began to talk horse to them, a subject on which he is quite as noted an expert as he is on finance, he had the entire crowd with him in a minute.

He couldn't speak much above a whisper, but he got next to the countrymen by his knowledge of horses and mules, and the principal speaker on the other side, who was a red-faced man in a dingy suit of homespun, who was introduced by the patriarch of the village as "Zeb, an orney critter, but a feller that knows horses and mules," and who constantly flicked a whip while he talked, was in a trance when the train pulled out.

Mr. Lawson's intimate knowledge of all matters pertaining to horse made quite a hit with the farmers that they stood in the middle of the track waving their ancient headgear as long as the train was in sight.

HOW LAWSON LOOKS TO A CHICAGO ARTIST

Sketch by D. J. Lavin, of the Chicago American, in Lawson's private car.

WHAT ARTIST LAVIN THINKS OF LAWSON

BY D. J. LAVIN.

LAWSON is a hard man to sketch. His expression changes at every word. When he looks at you his eye shoots through you. He dominated the entire crowd of men on the car. He is as restless as a cat. His hand is silent and walked a stranger into a crowd of men the other would feel that a giant in mentality had come one instant is on his knee, in another it is in the air. I among them. He never ceases to be courteous. He is the never saw a good likeness of Mr. Lawson. Every time the most remarkable man I ever met. light strikes his face you see a different man. His mind moves faster than lightning. He is as alert as a rattlesnake in action. Lawson can carry on a separate conversation with half a dozen men at once. If he were

PARTY CHIEFS WILL ASK DOUGLAS TO RUN AGAIN

STATE COMMITTEE TO ADOPT RESOLUTIONS TO THIS END AT TO-DAY'S MEETING.

At a special meeting of the Democratic State Committee in the Revere House this afternoon, Colonel William A. Gaston of Boston will offer resolutions asking Governor William L. Douglas to run again for Governor. There seems to be a strong feeling in the committee, and in State Democratic circles generally that these resolutions will be adopted.

Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy says:

"I have read the resolutions and they meet my approval. I have no doubt they will be signed by the entire committee."

Reuben Rich, who has general charge at the committee headquarters, No. 4 Liberty square, says:

"I have no doubt the Douglas resolutions will be accepted unanimously."

In connection with this meeting and the Douglas resolutions there comes straight from Camp Bartlett a denial of the sensational story, printed in a Boston morning paper, to the effect that Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles, who is at the camp in command of the militia mobilization, has been approached on the subject of being a candidate and had said he would accept if the nomination were tendered him.

John R. Thayer of Worcester, William H. Lincoln, ex-Mayor Quincy, Arthur B. Lyman and other "big men" in the committee are heartily in favor of the Douglas indorsement, and are deeply interested in the meeting of the State committee.

Ex-Mayor Quincy will preside. The resignation of John J. Flaherty from the chairmanship of the committee and of Robert J. Crowley of Lowell and of Charles S. Hamlin of Boston from the committee itself will be acted upon.

John C. Burke, of Lowell, will succeed Robert J. Crowley, of Lowell, on the committee and James H. Vahey, of Watertown, one of the Turkey counsel, will succeed Charles S. Hamlin.

mandant to postpone the execution of the remainder while he telegraphed to St. Petersburg for instructions. He received orders to shoot all the prisoners.

Accordingly a shooting party was formed and another batch of mutineers was drawn up. Just as receiving the command to fire the firing squad turned and shot their officers down in a dozen of them.

Another incident illustrating the prevailing confusion occurred at Odessa. An officer there shot and killed a sailor for refusing to obey an order, whereupon eight of the reservist's comrades sprang on the officer and stabbed him to death with their bayonets. The mutineers will undoubtedly be executed.

POTEMKIN'S CREW LOOTED TREASURY, THEN SUNK SHIP

KUSTENDJI, Roumania, July 11.—Besides scuttling the battleship Kniaz Potemkin before they left her, the mutineers aboard, it is now declared, took away from the vessel about $375,000 and gave it to the revolutionary committee. Of this sum 8 per cent was divided among the mutineers to enable them to leave Roumania if they so desired.

The Russian torpedo boat, No. 267, which accompanied the Kniaz Potemkin, has returned to Sebastopol and surrendered. The crew declare they did not mutiny, but were compelled to follow the battleship. Despite this assertion, they have been arrested and may be executed.

SECOND LANDING BY JAPANESE ON SAKHALIN ISLAND

TOKIO, July 11.—The navy department has received the following report from Admiral Kataoka:

"Two cruisers and four torpedo boats left Karasukovsk on July 10 with soldiers on board for the purpose of landing and occupying Cape Notoro.

"After some bombardment the place was taken. The lighthouse and buildings were left undestroyed.

"Four prisoners were taken."

Cape Notoro is the most southerly point of Sakhalin Island on La Perouse straits, directly facing Cape Soya on the Japanese coast. It commands the straits.

BOSTON HEBREWS SEND MONEY TO FIGHT THE CZAR

Boston Hebrews have just forwarded $360.37 to Geneva, Switzerland, as their first contribution toward the immense fund which is being raised to buy arms against Russian oppression. A committee of twenty-five is now collecting money every week and probably several thousand dollars will be sent out from Boston alone before the collections cease.

The Jews all over the world are interested in this big "Jewish Self-defense Fund," is it is called. It is an immense organized effort to fight Russian oppression. The movement is not very new in Europe, where the sufferings of the Russian Jews are an every-day story, but it is only recently that the Jews in this country have begun to contribute.

The Boston committee of twenty-five, which is raising money for the "fund," collects every Sunday. The collectors wear a little button badge, inscribed in Hebrew with the words "Boston Committee for the Jewish Self-defense Fund in Russia."

ASKS ALIMONY OF $125,000

CINCINNATI, O., July 11.—The secret of the hitch in a settlement of the divorce proceedings of Mrs. John E. Madden against her husband, the well-known turfman, became known to-day when it was stated that Mrs. Madden has asked for alimony amounting to $125,000. Attorneys have made several efforts to reach a compromise out of court, but have not been able to come near an agreement. At the time their domestic relations reached the breaking point Mr. Madden offered his wife his breeding farm, Hamburg Place, near Lexington, Ky., but she would not accept it in settlement of her rights in his estate. Mr. Madden is said to be anxious for a reconciliation.

TIPS INSULT COLLEGE BOYS

PORTLAND, Me., July 11.—Mayor James P. Baxter roundly scored the college students who during the Summer months work as waiters in hotels, and who are after known to accept tips from patrons, in an address made before the American Institute of Instruction which held its convention here.

"A tip represents the difference in social position between the one who gives and the one who receives," said Mayor Baxter. "No college student but should resent the offer of a tip as an insult to his citizenship. Are not students who accept such tips likely to become grafters and loafers? Such men are social pests."

The response was brief, and was made by J. G. Edgell of Fitchburg, Mass., the dean of New England superintendents.

MOTHER YIELDS TO BABY'S PLEA

After saying in Woburn District Court, "I would rather go to jail for three years than live with my husband," Mrs. William Iaviello of Lynn was reconciled to her husband by hearing their two-year-old baby girl cry: "Mamma, mamma." The family took down, went over to the child, and with her discharge granted by the court, walked meekly with her husband and baby.

Mrs. Iaviello came to East Woburn yesterday to visit friends and landed later in the lockup, charged with intoxication. Her husband was in court to-day with their baby. Mrs. Iaviello at first declared she did not want to go home. The judge said: "If you have any love for your child you will go home."

The husband was sitting outside the railing holding the baby, who set up at that moment the pitiful cry that reached the mother's heart.

Climb to the Clouds.

The goal of the racers is Mount Washington where the contest will witness the "climb to the clouds," a race against time from Bretton's Woods to the summit of the mountain, after which the tour will return to New York, having covered about 1,000 miles according to the deed of gift.

The passengers and baggage carried by the racers to the White Mountains number from 250 to 300, the largest number of passengers ever having accompanied a racing tour in this country.

The number of cars left in the contest is placed conspicuously to have blood flowing on white cards, which will serve for identification of the cars as they speed over the country.

"The first contestant to start today was Miss Alice L. Dye," said Secretary Clark. "She was three passengers and a chauffeur with him.

It is interesting to note that among the entries are two women who will drive alone. They are Miss Fuller of Boston and Mrs. John Newton Cuba of Richmond Hill, L. I. The latter is said to be one of the most accomplished motorists in the country and has established several records so far $1,000 that she could depart anyone of her sex in a race on the road.

Another Boston entry is Elliot C. Lee, one of the directors of the Automobile Association of America.

LEAVES WOMAN HE SWORE HE'D NEVER DESERT

Threat of Disinheritance Makes Walter Langdon Forget Chivalrous Vow.

TO BE SENT TO VERMONT

Special to the Boston American.

WINSTED, Ct., July 11.—Under threat of being disinherited, young Walter Langdon has surrendered to his father's wishes to leave Mrs. Janet L. Wilson, the woman he helped escape from the Hudson River Asylum, conducted by Dr. Langdon.

Dr. Langdon wanted the boy to go with him, but the youth would not do so, saying it would be unchivalrous to forsake Mrs. Wilson without arranging for her proper care.

It was only after four hours of persuasion that Walter was induced by his father to unbar the door of his room, behind which he had remained barricaded since Sunday morning, because he feared his father might kidnap him. It took several hours more to get him to agree to desert Mrs. Wilson. The threat of disinheritance finally brought him to terms.

Just before leaving here, a much worried man, Dr. Langdon said:

"Everything has been arranged for Walter going away. His destination will be some quiet place in Vermont. I would not leave here if I wasn't sure he would keep his word. Mrs. Wilson undoubtedly exerted hypnotic influence over the boy, and it was only after a few days hard work that I rescued him from the spell.

"Under normal conditions my son would never be thought of doing what he did. It was simply a case of hypnotism. Mrs. Wilson's eyes are the most penetrating I ever saw."

Young Wilson admitted to an AMERICAN reporter that he had agreed to separate from the woman.

"I would have accompanied my father," he said, "were it not that I wish to remain at Highland Lake until a friend of Mrs. Wilson, who has consented to look after her, arrives. That will be on a week or two.

"Then you have changed your mind about allowing nothing but death or a straight jacket to separate you from Mrs. Wilson, as you said yesterday?" the young man was asked.

"Yes," he replied, smiling, "I have capitulated."

"Do you still love Mrs. Wilson?"

"She still occupies a place in my heart," was the answer.

Mrs. Wilson says she is perfectly satisfied with the course young Langdon has chosen. She says she would not allow any of him to run off with me and wrong one me to encourage him," she said. "For his parents' sake, I now regret my part in the affair were made so public.

"There are those here who do not believe Langdon will keep faith with his father. Now that the latter has gone, it is not thought possible the youth and Mrs. Wilson will live where here. As yet none of Mrs. Wilson's relatives has visited her, nor has she heard from or communicated with any of them.

ROCKEFELLER AID FOR PEARY POLE SEARCH

Standard Oil King Said to Be Ready to Contribute to the Fund.

MORE MONEY IS NEEDED

NEW YORK, July 11.—Sailing Master W. S. Houghton of the Arctic exploring steamer Roosevelt is authority for the statement that the mysterious millionaire who offered to be one of ten to contribute $50,000, or one of ten to contribute $100,000 in response to Commander Peary's appeal for money to equip and start the polar dash of the Roosevelt, is none other than John D. Rockefeller. The offer came promptly in response to the appeal issued by Commander Peary, who wishes to raise at least $50,000 more before starting. At the time the offer was made, Commander Peary refused to give the name of the millionaire making the offer, but the news has leaked out.

In addition to this veiled cash offer, which is readily recognizable as the Rockefeller scheme of offering to contribute if others will raise their share, the Standard Oil company is furnishing all the oil used by the Peary expedition. One of the big oil items taken on board the Roosevelt during the past few days was 2,000 cases of kerosene oil and seventeen barrels of lubricating oil—all presents from Rockefeller's company.

All day long the steedores wheeled truck load after truck load of supplies aboard the stout, trim Roosevelt as she lay at her dock. Vast quantities of bacon, pemmican, flour, sugar, pork, beef, oatmeal, corn meal, split pease and colognes spirits are stowed away in the hold for the long cruise among the ice fields. The day of the start has not yet been set, although now hoped that it would be next Saturday, when the necessary funds are raised before then the expedition will be delayed for a short time longer.

The richness are, however, that the start will be made on Saturday, as money is coming in daily to swell the fund. Commander Peary announced today that during yesterday he had received $6,000 toward the expedition, of this amount $5,000 came from a Wall street financier, who asked Mr. Peary to keep his name secret. The other $1,000 was given by John S. Huyler. This makes altogether $16,000 that the explorer has received during the past week

PEACE ENVOYS WILL MEET AT PORTSMOUTH

Russia and Japan Will Settle Differences in General Store at Navy Yard.

BUILDING FINE AND NEW

PORTSMOUTH, July 11.—The citizens of this city, New Hampshire's only seaport, are highly elated over the news that the peace conference between Japan and Russia is to be held at the navy yard here.

The conference will be held to the new general store building just completed at the yard. Rear Admiral W. W. Mead said today that this building was the only practicable place in the yard for such a meeting, and that it was specially adapted to such a purpose.

The building is the largest and finest in the yard and cost over $100,000. It is of brick, of the latest improved design, and thoroughly modern appointments. It is three stories high and 100 by 200 feet dimensions, with a fine granite entrance.

Second Floor for the Envoys.

The second floor will be given over to the envoys. On this floor there is a fine suite of offices. One large main office can be used for the conference and on each side are offices for the private use of the envoys. On the same floor is a large fire and burglar proof vault where the records could be kept.

By holding the conference at the yard a marine guard can keep the public back and the envoys will be free from interference. It is understood that they will have their headquarters at the Hotels Wentworth at Newcastle, four miles away, making the trip by launch to the yard.

The selection of Portsmouth as the meeting place is in a great measure due to Judge Calvin Page. About two years ago Mr. Stickney, the owner of the large hotel at Bretton Woods, in the White Mountains, through Governor John McLane, tendered the use of a portion of the large hotel to the State Department at Washington as the meeting place for the Russo-Japanese representatives.

Seacoast Point Desired.

After a limited correspondence it was found that the mountain resort was entirely out of the question, as a place was desired near the seacoast which could be reached by a sailing craft. It was then that Governor McLane, accompanied by Secretary of State Edward N. Pearson, of Concord, came to this city to see what accommodations could be furnished the distinguished party.

Judge Page, who is one of the trustees of the Frank Jones estate, was seen and it is understood that he at once informed Governor McLane that if the plenipotentiaries of Russia and Japan would agree to hold their peace conference in this vicinity he would personally extend the official party, which with their attaches will compose about twenty-five persons, to the Hotel Wentworth.

The Wentworth is one of the largest Summer hotels on the New England coast and is so arranged that suitable apartments can be had for the party whereby they will not be obliged to mingle with the other guests of the hotel.

The plan as outlined is for Assistant Secretary of State Herbert H. Pierce and other representatives of the United States government to be quartered at the Rockingham Hotel in this city, one of the finest hotels east of Boston.

The transatlantic cable station at Rye Beach is likely to prove of value in case emergencies arise making it necessary for the envoys to seek advice from their governments.

While the envoys will not reach here until some time early in August, wireless Mr. Takahira, the Japanese Minister, and Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, may be expected before that date.

EACH SET OF ENVOYS TO HAVE U. S. YACHT AT ITS DISPOSAL

WASHINGTON, July 11.—To make it easy to preserve the desired secrecy during their deliberations the peace plenipotentiaries of Russia and Japan have agreed that they will meet in the new general storehouse at the Portsmouth navy yard, where the United States Government will protect them from outside interference of any kind.

The navy yard is on an island in the middle of the Piscataqua River, which forms the boundary between New Hampshire and Maine, and the new house is in the middle of the yard.

While the commission is in session no one will be allowed on the island without a special pass, and even newspaper correspondents and their aids will be permitted to enter the grounds.

The plenipotentiaries will not come to Washington at all unless they are expected, but will get down to business at Portsmouth as quickly as possible. There will be met at New York by Assistant Secretary of State Loomis, and from there go with them to Oyster Bay, where they will take luncheon with the President.

The Mayflower and the Dolphin will be waiting at Oyster Bay to take the peace potentiaries to Portsmouth under convoy of a cruiser. Not more than will accompanies can be carried on each of the two yachts, and some of the subordinates of the two staffs will have to go to Portsmouth by train.

There will be no transfer in two ships the plenipotentiaries will be relieved from the responsibility of traveling together.

The Mayflower and Dolphin will be stationed at Portsmouth while the peace plenipotentiaries are there, and will be at their disposal, the ships being assigned for that commission. If the commissioners should wish to be left entirely alone, and want to go out to see to think things over, they will only have to summon their aids.

The Plenipotentiaries will not come to Washington until they are ready to sign the peace treaty, unless cold weather should drive them away from Portsmouth before they have agreed on terms.

Secretary Root may extend the formal welcome to the commissioners at New York, as he probably will have to go to his office before they arrive. They are expected to meet during the first week in August.

RUSSIA ASKS THAT MUTINEERS BE GIVEN UP AS MURDERERS

ST. PETERSBURG, July 11.—Negotiations between Russia and Roumcnia on the question of the surrender of the crew of the Knaz Potemkin are in progress.

Russia is disposed to insist on the surrender of the men, not as political prisoners, but as criminals guilty of murder and theft.

The Roumanian Government is somewhat embarrassed by the fact that it granted the mutineers if they surrendered that they would be treated as deserters.

SEARCHLIGHTS GET FUGITIVES

Special to the Boston American.

NEW LONDON, July 11.—It was learned today that half a dozen jackies aboard the cruising battleship Connecticut made their escape to the mainland on Saturday night from the ship while at anchor in Gardiner's Bay. The night was very foggy and well adapted for the carrying out of the plans of the sailors. The men landed with several other warships was midway from Greenport and Plum Island, a long swim even for trained athletes.

The sailors donned life preservers and, at a concerted signal, jumped from the warship.

The absence of six men would probably not have been noticed had not one of their number struck a strong eddy peculiar to the waters of the Race, and fearing that he would be drowned in the maelstrom yelled lustily for help. His cries were heard aboard the Maryland, and immediately all the ship's searchlights were scouring the adjacent waters. The small boats were manned and lowered, and by the aid of the powerful electric rays the fugitives were soon rounded up and brought safely back to their vessel, where they are now doing penance in the brig.

BRITISH ARMY NO GOOD, SAYS LORD ROBERTS

In Hot Speech He Says People Have Disregarded Lessons and Neglect Troops.

SCORES PRESENT SYSTEM

LONDON, July 11.—Field Marshal Lord Roberts created a sensation in the House of Lords, when in a lengthy and well-considered speech he deliberately expressed his opinion as a practical soldier that the military force of Great Britain was inadequate, imperfectly trained and totally unfit to uphold Great Britain as a first-class power.

Lord Roberts scathingly attacked the people of England, who, he said, showed no national feeling towards the military until danger arose.

The speech was delivered in connection with a motion introduced by the Earl of Wemyss and March (conservative) traversing Premier Balfour's statement regarding the impossibility of the invasion of Great Britain and urging the necessity of keeping up sufficient land forces to repel any possible invasion.

He had no hesitation in saying that the armed forces of Great Britain, as a body, were now as absolutely untitted and unprepared for war as they were when the South African trouble broke out.

He declared emphatically that the choice lay between conscription or some practical system of universal training and that only by such means would it be possible for Great Britain to possess armed forces organized and trained to meet the demands of the empire in the event of war.

The country has to deal with the question of the life or death of the empire, the issue of which depended upon Great Britain being ready to defend her eastern possessions and at the same time take part in any affair nearer home, either of which necessitated the placing in the field of an army as large and efficient as that of any of the European countries, all of which might be regarded as nations in arms.

Every other European country regarded the army as part of the nation, while England considered her army to be something quite outside the national life, and she thought was bestowed upon it by the civil population, except as part of a political party partisan platform.

Lord Roberts appealed to the country to awake to its danger and to take hold of the army as a great national task on which the existence of Great Britain depended.

BOY RESCUED BY COMPANIONS

Cramp Seizes Him When Swimming and He Is Saved Just in Time.

WERE IN A MEDFORD POND

Two boys today rescued from drowning John Finkel, ten years old, of Medford, who had been seized by a cramp while swimming in Everett's Pond, Medford, and after taking him out of the water worked with him until the Finkel boy was completely recovered. The rescuers are William Pelderman, thirteen years old, of No. 83 Winter street, Malden, and George Hickey, twelve years old, of No. 9 Edmund street, Malden.

Pelderman, in telling of the rescue, said:

"There was all of our gang in bathing when I heard Finkey holler. I thought he was fooling. But I started after him. Hickey did, too, and we saw that he was going to drown quick unless we did something. We got him as he was going down, and dragged him on the bank. Then we pulled that old crazy out of him."

The Finkel boy didn't want to talk about the rescue.

"I guess I had a cramp all right. I could move my legs all right, but my arms wouldn't go. I yelled, and then Bill and Hickey got me just in time. Say, don't tell dad about this, for I want to go in swimming again."

Two years ago Hickey, who is known as the "water rat" of the neighborhood, rescued four-year-old Fred Dooley, who was drowning in Railroad Creek, near Hickey's home.

GOV. DOUGLAS HELD UP FOR AUTO SPEEDING

Son-in-Law Ordered to Appear in Court for Fast Driving at Buzzards Bay.

PEOPLE VERY INDIGNANT

BUZZARDS BAY, July 11.—Residents of the town are incensed at the action of police officers in stopping Governor Douglas in his auto near the railroad station, and ordering his son-in-law, Charles E. Richmond, to appear in Barnstable District Court to-morrow to answer to a charge of violation of the speed law.

Governor Douglas with his wife and a party of friends was riding from Monument Beach when they were stopped by Officers Harding and Berry. Mr. Richmond was driving the machine. As it approached, Officer Harding timed the auto over an 1-mile measured course, and says he found it was going at excessive speed. He signaled Officer Berry to stop it.

Mr. Richmond protested that he was not running at more than eight miles an hour, and claims his cyclometer showed that speed. The officers swore by the watch, and refused to allow the Governor's presence from interfering with their duty. They say they do not recognize the Governor as the guilty person, holding only Mr. Richmond, as he was driving the auto.

The case will be heard before Judge Swift in the District Court at Barnstable, unless the Selectmen take some action in the matter. Should the case be acted upon Mr. Richmond will probably contest it.

Governor Douglas is very reticent about the matter and will not discuss it.

STRIKES LESS FREQUENT IN OLD BAY STATE

Bureau of Statistics of Labor Shows Falling Off in Number of Labor Troubles.

FEWER TRAMPS IN STATE

The June bulletin of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor issued today shows a decided falling off in the number of strikes and lockouts in Massachusetts for the past six months as compared with 1904.

From November to April of this year the bureau finds that there were sixty-five strikes and lockouts as compared with 100 for the previous six months of 1904, and with ninety-five for the corresponding six months in 1903-4.

In twenty-seven cases the strikers failed, in fourteen they were successful, and in sixteen the points at issue were compromised. After the Fall River textile controversies which leads the list of State labor troubles with twenty-two strikes the boot and shoe industry comes next with eight strikes, the building trades with seven, the granite cutters with six, teamsters with five, the shirt makers, blacksmiths, metal workers and laborers with two each.

The principal causes of the strikes were wage disputes, increased number of hours demanded, shorter hours, better working conditions and protests against the employment of non-union men. In summing up the significance of the strike statistics the bulletin states that there is a "growing tendency in this State to supplant strikes and lockouts by amicable adjustments of labor controversies through committees of employers and employes or arbitration boards."

The bureau finds that the number of tramps in the State on May 1 last was 370, as compared with 802 on May 1, 1903. An enumeration of tramps being cared for in public institutions on May 1 last showed that forty-five cities and towns in the State were entertaining tramps on that night, and that 306 reported no tramps.

It is too soon to give the results of the state census for 1905, but the June bulletin devotes much attention to the men and women who took that census. Of the fatal number 1,200 persons who were appointed to enumerate the population of the State, the bulletin says, many of them were out of work at the time of appointment, some of them having been unemployed for an entire year.

GUILD'S MILK IN RHEUMATIC JIM

Did Not Know It Was for the Lieutenant-Governor's Breakfast.

James Sarsfield Cooke, alias "Rheumatic Jimmy Cooke," admits he wouldn't have stolen that milk-jar and bottle had he known it was intended for Lieutenant-Governor Guild's breakfast.

Meanwhile close watch is being kept on the stoop of the Guild home on Beacon street to see that no one else purloins the official milk.

And incidentally, Patrolman Durgin of Joy street station is the only street sleuth Sherlock Holmes on the force, for his keen search in seeing a piece of wrapping paper and thereby tracing a stolen loaf of bread, and an equally stolen jar of milk, all to James Sarsfield Cooke, yclept "Rheumatic Jimmy."

It was 4:45 a. m. Patrolman Durgin passed the Guild mansion on Beacon street. On the steps reposed a milk jar.

"Oh, well," quoth Cop Durgin, "methinks the captain was overcautious in warning us to beware of milk thieves. By jon jar I wot no thief is prowling here. 'Tis well," and Cop Durgin capped on.

At 5:15 Cop Durgin strode down Mount Vernon street sidewalk. He spied a piece of wrapping paper.

"Beshrew me," quoth he, "but that paper is marvellously like those the baker uses in which to wrap his nutritious loaf. I will betake me back and search for traces of thieves which stole the loaf."

So Cop Durgin betook himself back down Beacon street and was horror-struck to see that the Guild milk jar was gone, leaving but a milky ring to mark where it had stood.

Then Cop Durgin stretched long, and in a narrow alley spied James Sarsfield Cooke, stuffing the last of the loaf in his mouth, with the empty milk jar in the hind.

"Twas the Lieutenant-Governor's milk you purloined, wretch," said Cop Durgin.

"That never occurred to me. Honest, it didn't," said James Sarsfield Cooke, who is now on probation on a charge of larceny of eighteen cents' worth of milk and milk jar.

HEBREWS INDIGNANT OVER BAN ON MUSIC AT SUNDAY WEDDINGS

They Talk of Presenting United Protest to the Police Commissioners.

The younger Hebrew set in Boston with intentions of marriage, especially those in the police district of Captain "Bucky" O'Lalor of the East Dedham street station, are talking of presenting a united protest to the Police Commissioners against being forbidden to have professional musicians play at their Sunday weddings.

Captain O'Lalor ruled that hired musicians who played at Sunday weddings would be arrested on charge of breaking the Sabbath. Immediately ingenious devices were employed to outwit the police. Some bridal couples hired musicians, but made them wait till the stroke of midnight, when it was no longer Sunday, but Monday. Others had "friends" come in and play for them as a favor, so they were not "working."

Miss Jennie Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sherman of 22 Salem street, was married to Israel Hershman in Concord Hall, at the South End, and Captain O'Lalor gave positive instructions that there be no music, professional or otherwise. The bridegroom declared that on Friday last he went to Superintendent of Police Pierce and asked permission to have music at his wedding.

Talked With Superintendent.

"I told the superintendent that I had made arrangements for the wedding some weeks ago and issued invitations to friends outside the 324th, or 22d, Court," said postmaster Hershman. "Captain O'Lalor, you know, waits for literary weddings on Sundays. The superintendent told me he saw no objection to having music, and told me that as the wedding was in Captain O'Lalor's district I would have to see the captain. Superintendent Pierce said: 'When you see the captain explain matters to him and tell him to call me up on the telephone, and I will talk with him.' I went to the station Friday and the captain declared that no music would be permitted. I repeated my conversation with the superintendent, but the captain said if the superintendent had any orders to give he could write them out and send them to the station.

"I was much disappointed, but I hired an orchestra, and when the hour of midnight was striking the band struck up and played for three hours, so that those present could dance and enjoy themselves. I can't understand how they allow music in every other division and none in the fifth division. Something will have to be done to remedy the matter."

Orchestra of "Friends."

Miss Rebecca Berman, of Paris street, and Hyman Feldman were happy, for they had an orchestra composed of "friends" to furnish the music in Commonwealth Hall, East Boston, there being two cornets, two violins and a bassoon to enliven the wedding festivities. There was no police interference, it being understood that any but "professional musicians" could play on Noddle Island.

Down in Schwartz Hall, at the West End, a violinist and pianist furnished the music, both being friends of the couple. No attempt was made by the police to stop the music or interfere.

A twelve-year-old boy furnished the wedding marches at a double wedding held in Grand Central Hall, the proprietor of the hall having been informed that no orchestra would be allowed, by direction of Captain Kimball of Station 1. The distinction drawn in this division was against "hired" musicians.

NAHANT, July 11.—Mrs. Lottie Hoise of Lynn was the first to pay a quarter for a bathing suit at the opening of the new state bath house at Nahant. Her money will be framed and hung in the building.

Nearly 500 people availed themselves of the bathing privilege between the opening and closing time. The bath house is similar in design to the big one at Revere and accommodates about 300 bathers at a time. The foreman is William A. Anderson, and his staff numbers twenty-one.

SCOTT SPECIAL BREAKING ALL SPEED RECORDS

Sustains Schedule Half Way Across Continent, in Spite of Accident.

MILLIONAIRE "SPEED MAD"

ST. LOUIS, July 11.—Speed-mad Walter Scott, with his special trans-continental train, is whirling across a clear track from Kansas City. He is due here within a short time, and a crowd has gathered at the station to see the "mad millionaire," who is going to New York to show the rubes there how to spend money.

Scott left Kansas City at 9:37, just 2¼ minutes behind record-breaking schedule. The train reached Dodge City from Los Angeles just twenty-seven minutes ahead of time.

Those twenty-seven minutes hide a tale of wonderful velocity across New Mexico and Colorado, for the train was thirty two minutes late out of Albuquerque, N. M., due to an accident in which only a cool engineer, quick-witted fireman and the grit of the train saved the deaths of all on board. Scott was asleep in his berth. When told all that had happened he screwed his face up into a characteristic grimace, tugged at his bushy shock of hair and took it entirely as a matter of course that the train crew should perform a miracle in his interest.

He pays for the fastest time in the world and he expects it. There is nothing slow about the man who chartered the South Valley scenic speed, speed, more speed, that is his cry. If the engineers make the fearful schedule he mapped out for them, Scott wants to know why they did not cut off a few minutes. He is speed mad, and the malady is a dangerous one.

At Las Vegas a new schedule has been arranged, under which the train will reach Chicago at 12:35 this afternoon—in forty-four hours and thirty-five minutes from Los Angeles, instead of fifty-two hours, as called for by the original schedule.

CATHOLICS IN BIG CONVENTION

Educators Gather in New York to Discuss Problems of Their Schools.

NEW YORK, July 11.—Catholic educators from all parts of the United States are gathering here for the big convention of the American Catholic Educational Association. A reception was tendered delegates from other cities by the educators of the archdiocese of New York at the Buckingham Hotel, which will be head quarters for the convention.

The Rev. Louis S. Walsh of the archdiocese of Boston is president of the national association, and besides presiding over the main meeting, will contribute two valuable papers. His report on the attendance of schools in the archdiocese of Boston will show that there are now 44,350 pupils in the free elementary schools of the archdiocese, and an attendance of 26,300 in the parochial elementary schools in Massachusetts.

The Boston archdiocese ranks third in the matter of Catholic school attendance, being surpassed only by New York and Chicago.

The convention opens to-day with a solemn pontifical high mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral, solemnized by Archbishop Farley. A reception committee will take place Thursday night in Carnegie Hall.

3 LADS SAFE, NOT DROWNED

While parents and police were anxiously searching for Preston Duff, fifteen years old, of No. 32 Belfort street, Dorchester, and Fred Myers, aged fourteen, of No. 31 Belfort street, both reported missing relatively thirteen and sixteen years, of No. 52 Harvest street, South Boston, who failed to return home from their usual day's outing, the three lads were having a blissful good time in Squantum. They had delayed their departure for home until an early hour to-day.

The boys left home yesterday morning, saying they were going to Swampscott, to get a boat, and it was feared by their parents that they were caught in the storm which swept the harbor yesterday afternoon. Lieutenant Hall of Police Station No. 11 was in charge of the search for the boys, but ceased his efforts when Inspector S. Taylor of No. 52 Harvest street, South Boston, reported that the boys were at Squantum.

BAY STATE HIT IN BANK CRASH

THE BRIDES AND GROOMS.

Many persons in Lynn, Salem, Beverly, Wenham and other cities and towns, have been caught in the collapse of the People's United States Bank at St. Louis, whose funds, amounting to $2,500,000, are now in the hands of a receiver.

Nearly sixty Beverly people were subscribers in amounts ranging from $1 to $500, being caught by advertisements in a woman's magazine, said to be run by Edward G. Lewis, president of the bank.

The receiver, Judge S. R. Spencer, at St. Louis, has ordered depositories of the bank to discontinue the issuance of money order checks, and thus $2,500,000 is tied up where investors cannot get it for some time.

BOY BATTLES FLAMES LIKE VETERAN FIREMAN

BOY WHO FOUGHT FIRE LIKE A VETERAN.

Dorchester Avenue Building Saved From Total Destruction by Young Lad's Heroic Work.

Captain E. B. Smith of No. 2150 Dorchester avenue, an ex-fire captain and a man of thirty-five years experience in fighting flames, gives principal credit today to Master Otis Brown, his Jewish neighbor, for putting out a dangerous blaze which had started in the captain's house. Captain Smith says Ralph is a born fire fighter.

Master Brown lives next door to the captain. Looking out of his window he saw smoke coming from the third floor of the captain's house, No. 2150 Dorchester avenue. Without stopping to tell his folks, he ran quickly to the captain's door and yelled at the top of his voice and then tore up stairs. When the captain reached the scene there was young Brown throwing water as fast as he could get it on the fire. The captain, who is himself an ex-fire fighter, came to the young fellow's assistance, and when the fire engine arrived had the fire under control, so that with the aid of a patent fire extinguisher it was soon put out.

To the reporter Captain Smith said: "By George, that's the bravest little fellow I ever saw. Why, the way he handled himself was a marvel. He's a born fire fighter. Do you know, young man, he was giving me orders where to throw the water, and not an old fireman, either. Well, well, I had to laugh, but the little fellow was a worker, and between us we had it pretty near out before the boys got here."

Ralph is a modest little chap, and would say nothing to the reporter beyond the fact that it was the captain who put the fire out, and he did was to put some water on it.

As it was the fire injured two people quite severely, so that one had to be treated at the Cottage Hospital. George W. Tower, who attempted to help the firemen, was severely burned on the arms and face. Mrs. Wells, who lives on the floor where the fire started, was badly burned on the forehead and shoulders and had her hair burned entirely off.

The damage to the property was about $300, covered by insurance.

Bancroft, president of the Boston Elevated Railway Company, another of Groton's sons, will be the president of the day, and will preside as toastmaster at the dinner. Among others who will speak at the dinner are the Lieutenant Governor, Bishop Lawrence, George A. Marden, District Attorney Sanderson, W. Murray Crane, Congressman Tirrell, George J. Burns and Mayor Jones, of Nashua, N. H., once a part of Groton.

SOLDIERS TO LEAVE CAMP BARTLETT TO-MORROW

Universally Agreed That Season's Instruction Has Proved Remarkably Successful—Dinner Given General Miles.

Special to the Boston American.

CAMP BARTLETT, July 11.—To-morrow the school of instruction at this camp will come to a close at 12 o'clock noon. The questions the officers in charge are asking themselves are one another are: Has it been a success? Has it been worth the price? When will we have another here? It has been a success, say all the officers.

It certainly has been worth the price, say a majority. It should be an annual event, is the opinion of the majority of officers to a man. And all along the line, if there should be a vote by companies, it would be almost unanimous in favor of instruction, such as this one, every Summer at Camp Bartlett. Not only the militia officers are pleased with their camp, but the regular army officers praise it highly. More emphatically by favor of it than any set of officers are the enlisted men of both federal and State troops.

War Game on To-night.

The real war game will undoubtedly be on to-night. It will be the last night of camp and there must be right work before the school closes. At just what hour and in what order the troops will be ordered to do night work General Miles will not say, even the highest officers. Yesterday was a most unsatisfactory day from an instructionist standpoint. The interest had told on men and horses. It was simply intolerable until the shower came and the dust of the downpour compelled a cessation of hostilities until evening.

And then the problem was hurriedly worked out. The wide stretch of sand and khaki across the plain, at least a two-mile front, was a beautiful sight. The proposition was a demonstration of turning the enemy's left flank. The first day's first proposed to have a brigade fight, but, as the officers were interested in the movement that has been so successfully worked by the Japs, General Miles decided to defend one side it. It is the movement that Oyama has used so decisively against Kuropatkin and Linevitch, and there was no reason why if the troops learn but that one feature of the war here at this camp they will have received a knowledge well worth the price.

Troops Show Aptitude.

The other officers agree with him, and they all say the troops have shown great aptitude in grasping the idea of the movement and remarkable alertness in carrying it out. There will be more instruction to-day.

Chief Cash of the Westfield police is angry over the riot stories that have been published. He said to a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN:

"I wish you would deny those canards. They are an injustice to the soldiers and reflect unjustly on the ability of my force. Of course there has been a little trouble, but the total has been unexpectedly small. The people here appreciate the camp and have no fault to find with the men. The police force had no trouble."

It is not in Westfield but at camp where most of the trouble has been. Some of the company commanders having been too easy until General Miles put his foot down.

Discipline Improved.

Discipline was noticeably better last night in both brigades. There was an exciting few minutes in the Ninth's quarters yesterday afternoon. Cook Sergt. Gourty, surgeon, had a clash with a cook over sanitary features of his kitchen, and charges are preferred. Lieutenant Colonel ordered the king of the kitchen under arrest, whereupon Captain Sullivan of the Ninth protested. Despite his protest, Captain Kenealy, officer of the day, and Corporal Bowen, 1, company, and corporal of the guard, to take the cook to the guard tent, which he did. All the time men of the Ninth, massed around the scene, cheered Captain Sullivan and said uncomplimentary things about the Infantry.

"They'll let him go," shouted an exulted soldier as the cook was led away, and the crowd took up the cry.

Stilled the Tumult.

Captain Sullivan stilled the tumult with a few words. In a short time the cook was released from duress, and on his return to post the men gave him three cheers and a tiger.

The polished toasts of General Miles for Governor was given a big shove last night at the reception in his honor at the home of Daniel F. Doherty, member of the Democratic State Committee. Many prominent politicians were in the gathering and the General was given plenty of assurance that he would receive strong support if he should be the Democratic candidate for Governor. The General was thankful, but refused to commit himself.

FIRST HEAVIES PUT IN FIRST DAY AT RODMAN BUSILY

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, July 11.—The First Heavies entered upon the first day's work at Fort Rodman with a spirit and will that was magnificent to behold. Through out the day, from early morning, when Major Quinby's Battalion went through their infantry drill evolutions, until 5:55 o'clock, the men were kept at it steadily, and by their unremitting efforts won the unqualified praise from Major Willoughby Walke, commander of the post.

Particularly effective was the evening parade, in which the regulars took part. Hundreds of spectators lined the parade grounds, and on all sides could be heard expressions of delight at the precision evidenced by the troops in drill, their right and left wheeling.

While not neglecting infantry drills, Colonel Frye has inaugurated a artillery practice shall form the salient feature of the tour of duty. The batteries were put through a strenuous course on the drags gearing guns. D Battery, Captain Frothingham, manned the guns at Clark's point and at Battery Craig, just east, for exercise with the 15-inch rifles and simultaneously Captain Lombard of E fired out of camp with his gun crews, the men taking stations at Battery Walcott (eight-inch guns) and at Battery Clinton (thirteen pounders). In the second drill period the men were succeeded by crews from batteries K, Captain Howes, and C, Captain Norman.

The battery commanders for morning and afternoon attended school in fire direction held in the fire commander's station on the sloping fort. In the afternoon Lieutenant Spenceley organized a signal department, using the men an extra hour at their own request.

Through the courtesy of Major Walke, the officers of the post have been given electric lights.

Quartermaster Sergeant Smith, acting ordinance sergeant, brought into camp to-day the remainder of the 3-inch rifles and ammunition.

The Thursday target practice with the rapid fire and disappearing guns will be taken up by the 15th, giving each forward to making new records. So far the fleet of the 15th for the sea has been selected, and although each company is allowed eight men and two officers to represent them in the city, the men are so delighted with their camp quarters that few of them prefer to stay in camp.

The regimental rifle team, under Captain Lombard, will proceed to the range at Wakefield to-morrow, the purpose of practising for the State general competition to be held in August.

Dyspepsia of Women

ABSOLUTELY NEEDLESS AGONY

Caused by Uterine Disorders and Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. M. Wright

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by a derangement of the female organism and which, while it causes a disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved by such remedies as which not only nets as a stomach tonic, but has peculiar uterine-tonic effects also.

As proof of this theory we call attention to the case of Mrs. Maggie Wright, Brooklyn, N. Y., who was completely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after everything else had failed. She writes:

"For two years I suffered with dyspepsia which so degenerated my entire system that I was unable to attend to my daily duties. I felt weak and nervous, and nothing that I ate tasted good and it caused a disturbance in my stomach. I tried different remedies, but nothing seemed to help me. I was advised to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and was happily surprised to find that it acted like a fine tonic, and in a few days I could see a change in the action of my food. My recovery was rapid, and in five weeks I was entirely well. I have recommended it to many suffering women."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement, or has such a record of cures of female troubles, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

BOSTON BOY GETS MEDAL

Brave Soldier to Be Honored by Congress at Fort Hoades. Next Week.

CINCINNATI, O., July 11.—In a few days Sergeant Riley, eighteen, a Boston boy, will be presented the first of the newly designed gold medals of honor given by Congress for great personal bravery.

Riley was a member of the Ninth Cavalry Scouts, and his deed of valor, which earned him the medal was performed in the Philippines.

The young fellow will be presented the medal at Fort Thomas, Ky., where he has gone. The presentation will be made July 21 by General Chaffee, in the presence of the entire Fifteenth Cavalry, which will arrive at the post on the date.

Riley's act of bravery was performed in Dalaos, Island of Lamar, on April 10. Sergeant Riley, with a small command, was scouting for a body of insurgent Pouliteehees. The regiment was encamped some miles away from the scouting party, when a native runner brought the information. Under the saddle this note was found: "Body of Pouliteehees waiting five miles out. Have just come with command. Sergeant Riley."

When Riley reached the scene of the ambush they found Riley's command had been wiped out and the young sergeant himself terribly wounded. His head was cut open by a native bolo, and a deep wound was made by a bolo over his heart. When the second wound was made the bolo exposed a cross which Riley wore next his body, and the sight of it is thought to have saved him from another blow, the native probably mistaking it for an amulet of great power for death.

For months Riley lay ill, but finally worked his way out of the service. The matter was brought before Congress and the medal granted by the act of Congress of a good Boston family and enlisted under an assumed name.

KELLEY MAY FIGHT CHARGES IN COURT

KELLEY MAY FIGHT CASE IN COURT

By Joe Kelley.

If President Pulliam deals with me unjustly in my trial which comes off to-morrow, I will take the case to court, as did McGraw. I will not attend the hearing, which will be held in New York, as Pulliam wrote to me and intimated that my presence wasn't needed, as a statement would do as well.

Umpire—Klem.

The charges of Umpire Bauswine against Joe Kelley of the Cincinnati Reds will come up before President Pulliam of the National League to-morrow in New York. Kelley, who arrived in town to-day, says his presence will not be needed. He also declares if any unjust sentence is levied upon him he will bring the case to court, as did Mr. Grew.

This will be the first instance in the history of the league where a player has appeared before the president to answer charges during the playing season.

Much interest is centred in the case, as it will test the validity of the recent ruling of Judge Sheldon of Boston, who declared that a president of a base ball league could not fine a player or suspend him without a trial.

Kelley will be tried under Section 28 of the playing rules, which reads:

The President of the league shall have power, upon cause, to suspend for a definite period and to impose a fine, not exceeding $200, upon any league manager or player guilty of drunkenness or gross misbehavior, including intoxication, fighting, refusing to obey the umpire, using obscene, profane, vile or offensive language during the season, where the same is, in his opinion, calculated to bring disrepute upon the league or national game. Such fine can only be remitted by the Board of Directors after a hearing upon appeal duly prosecuted.

In his complaint to President Pulliam Umpire Bauswine alleged that Kelley bandied him as a crook and a grafter after the Cincinnati-Pittsburg game at Pittsburg, July 5.

President Garry Herrmann of the Reds, contends that even if Kelley did utter such terms as alleged by Bauswine that Pulliam has no authority to sentence him. Moreover, Herrman will stand behind Kelley until the last ditch, and fight the case to a finish.

"After the game in Pittsburg," said Kelley, to a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day, "I did nothing but call Bauswine. I knew that he was a policeman in Philadelphia, during the off-season, and I remarked that he must have a pretty good pull to be able to get off, when the police department comes under the civil service laws.

"Moreover, when Umpire Klem was arguing with Captain Clarke of the Pirates at the plate during the game, I went down to Bauswine and said that he ought to go and help Klem, as he was a policeman and could offer protection.

"Instead of taking the matter as a joke, Bauswine sits down and writes a statement to Pulliam, declaring that I had called him a crook and a grafter.

"Not once during my conversation to him did I mention the terms, and I have affidavits from Huggins and Hahn to certify it.

"Pulliam is getting now so that he will not let you look at one of his umpires. The next thing you know he'll have them put in glass cases."

Bob Ewing will do the pitching for the Reds this afternoon, while "Chick" Fraser will probably work for the Boston.

Kelley will get into the game himself, and will take Cutwell's place in left field.

CORCORAN AND HUGGINS OF THE REDS

Here are pictures of two of the Reds' star players, taken expressly for the BOSTON AMERICAN in St. Louis. Tommy Corcoran covers short, and Miller Huggins plays second. The former is regarded as one of the best shortstops in the National League. Huggins was hailed as a "find" last season and he is playing even better this year.

CHICAGO, July 11.—Unless there's a cloudburst the Champs and White Sox will play their first game to-day. It rained all night, but this morning the sun made its appearance bright and hot. Of course the grounds won't be in the best of shape but both managers want to escape any more postponed games.

Manager Collins of the Boston Americans has asked Charley Farrell, who was left behind in Boston, to look over Catcher Armbruster of the New London (Connecticut League team, and if he deems that backstop strong enough, to send him West at once.

This is because of the serious condition of "Terry" McGovern, the sorrel-topped catcher of the Champs. When the Boston team got here from Philadelphia, Carl Green immediately summoned a physician for McGovern. When that worthy arrived he immediately ordered "Mac" to his bed.

McGovern has been suffering severe pains in the groin, probably brought on by a collision he had at the plate with Pitcher Coakley in the opening game. However he gamely went in and caught the first game of Saturday's double-header.

McGovern's condition was very serious yesterday. His temperature jumped to 102, which is a very bad sign. However, toward evening his condition improved slightly.

Myron Grimshaw is also on the sick list, and it may be two or three days before he is able to get back into the game. In the meantime, "Buck" Freeman is performing creditably on first base.

Because of the poor condition of his team, Manager Collins has refused to play any double-headers in this city.

Young and Altrock are still carded to do the pitching for the rival teams to-day, and a fast game is expected.

TIGERS MAY BUY RELEASE OF GANZEL

DETROIT, July 11.—Since the break between Manager Armour and the local club and Charley Hickman, which ultimately resulted in Hickman's transfer to the Washington team, there has been a renewal of effort on the part of the Detroit management to make a deal whereby John Ganzel may play first base for the Tigers.

As ganzel is a minor league baseman, Lindsay is holding down the first sack at Detroit, but he is not the finished fielder that Ganzel is, for he much of a hitter. Since things have been breaking so badly for Ganzel in his Grand Rapids venture he is said to be anxious to go with the Detroit. That club is more chickering with the management of the Highlanders, and it is probable that Ganzel's release will be sold.

YACHTS REACH BOOTHBAY.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Me., July 11.—After a racing run of 55 miles from Isles of Shoals to Seguin, and a drift of a dozen miles more to this port, the cruising fleet of the Eastern Yacht Club anchored in the harbor here last night.

SANDY MAY WIN FROM JOHNSON

One of the most important bouts in the country is the one between Sandy Ferguson and Jack Johnson at the Dreamland Rink to-night. The winner will be the right candidate to go against Jeffries or whoever claims the heavyweight honors. These men are in the real heavyweight class, and, unlike Marvin Hart, are eligible to face Jeffries.

No one expects that the result means as well as Sandy himself, and he is training faithfully for the match.

The forfeits have been posted and straight Queensberry rules agreed upon, so that the preliminary arrangements are all completed.

Johnson got the decision over Sandy in California in a twenty-round battle in which Sandy knocked Johnson down three times. Sandy has never been knocked down and he says himself that this meeting will not go the limit, as the colored man has got to go under.

In Fast Bout With Erne, GOODMAN BEATEN.

Special to the Boston American.

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—In an interesting bout before the National A. C. this evening Abe Goodman was clearly outboxed by Young Erne of this city.

Although Erne had Goodman a-going in nearly every round, he wasn't able to make much effect upon the Hub Hebrew with his punches. Goodman made a bit with the fans by the way he stood the gaff.

In the opening rounds, Goodman had a slight lead over his opponent, and the Slowtown fans thought it was all over but the shouting as far as Erne was concerned. However, that was not to be, as Erne came to mid-ring and gave the Kid a walloping.

Goodman scored repeatedly in the first two rounds by body hammering. Both boxers got nasty punches in the face in the second, and both drew blood.

In the third and succeeding rounds Erne boxed as fast as a Kangaroo and had Abe's Boston boy fighting. He landed his work with blows to Goodman's body in fast succession, frequently to the "Goody's" with left and right swings to the jaw.

In the fifth round Goodman sent a left hook hard to Erne's jaw, but the latter came back with a series of straight lefts which drew blood from the Bostonian's mouth. The two continued their fast work in the last round, with Erne tiring somewhat from his exertions of the earlier rounds.

It was announced that Tommy Murphy of New York will box Tony Bender of Elizabeth at the A. C. next week, and that Joe Grim would box Jack Johnson on July 24.

BENYON SHIPS 17 HORSES FOR DETROIT MEET

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 11.—The string of trotters and pacers which will be campaigned by Ed Benyon on the Grand Circuit this season, has been shipped to Cleveland, where they will finish their preparations for the meeting which begins shortly at Detroit.

The stable is composed of 17 horses, among the lot being Jessie Benyon, the crack 3-year-old belonging to L. V. Harkness; Dan R, 2:08¾; Miss Georgia, trial 2:07¾; Lady Beade, trial 2:15; Rosly Lassie, trial 2:11¼, a 4-year-old pacing filly by Oratorio out of the dam of Audubon Boy, a two-year-old colt by Walnut Hall out of a sister to Mida, a three-year-old pacer by Bonnie Direct and a three-year-old trotter by the same sire.

DEXTER MAY GET CHANCE IN CLEVELAND

Special to the Boston American.

CLEVELAND, July 11.—So anxious is he that Cleveland shall win the pennant of the American League this season, President Kilfoyle has offered $2,500 for a second baseman, who will take Larry Lajoie's place until he returns to the game.

Although Kahl is playing the position as creditably as could be expected under the circumstances, President Kilfoyle isn't wholly satisfied with his work, and he is on the hunt for a first class man. The two defeats by the Browns and the beating yesterday by the Athletics have served to make Kilfoyle's desire for a good man to fill for Lajoie all the more keen.

It is said that Kilfoyle is negotiating with Charley Dexter, who has just been released by the Louisville team, and who is very much a free second baseman.

WALSH DODGED FIGHT, SAYS OWEN MORAN

NEW YORK, July 11.—After a three-months' tour in this country, during which he has had great success in the ring, Owen Moran, the English bantam champion, returned home to-day on the Umbard steamer Caronia. Moran only makes the trip so as to pay a short visit to his family.

"I will be back the latter part of August," said Moran, "and will then make a match for the world's championship. I now hold the English title, and there is no man in my class in England for me to fight over that way. Besides I have joined the featherweight division. No one has treated me right in this country. I have been looking to fight Jim for a prize or a purse. He very sensibly has dodged me, so far as fighting me in the ring is concerned. However, I bar no man living in my class, and hope for a match with Frankie Neil on my return. In particular do I want to express my great thanks for the treatment Tom O'Rourke, who has treated me royally, and he will direct my affairs when I return."

HART READY FOR ALL CHALLENGERS

CHICAGO, July 11.—Marvin Hart and his manager, Jack McCormick, returned from Reno yesterday with the champion's big boxing in the bonnets of both. McCormick in conversation to-day said he did not claim any out-and-out championship honors for his man, while Hart was willing to let his actions do most of the talking when the subject of the heavyweight title came up for discussion.

"It was a hard fight, all right," said Hart, "but there was never a moment when I didn't feel that victory would be mine. Root fought better than he did when we met before, but he did not have the knockout punch.

"It is true that Root floored me once in the fight, but it was a foul blow, as he hit me on the law after the bell rang. Jeffries thought it was unintentional, and let it go, and in the next round I was just as good as ever. By the time I got real set and got in my most telling blows over the kidneys Root was done. He put up a fine fight for a good many times, but it didn't hurt much and I was fresh when the finish came."

Manager McCormick said that challenges are coming in as thick as June bugs, and that Hart will accept the best in the near future. He said that he was willing to meet "Mike" Schreck in Salt Lake City early this Fall, and if Root wanted to meet Hart again he would accommodate him if the latter would put up $2,500 as a side bet—the fight to take place after the Schreck go.

He was also willing to take on Wrestler Gotch provided the Iowan puts up a substantial forfeit as an evidence of his sincerity.

Schreck arrived during the day and sought out Charles Essig, with whom he put up a forfeit of $1,000 to meet Hart. Jack Johnson or Bob Fitzsimmons. Schreck insisted that the round Fitzsimmons backed out of the match with him was purely because Bob found out that he no longer could stand training.

HIGH-CLASS SPORT AT PROVIDENCE

To insure the public throughout New England of the high-class racing to be held at Narragansett Park, July 17 to August 5, the association has announced that the following owners have entered their horses: August Belmont, R. T. Wilson, F. S. P. Randolph, James R. Keene, S. S. Brown, the Longview stable, Boston stable, Fred Burlew, trainer for Pierre Lorillard and Newton Bennington, T. J. Gaynor's stable, M. L. & J. L. Hayman's stable, James Rowe stable, Adolph stable, A. L. Aste's stable, Waldron & Littlefield's stable, Carroll Reed, trainer of The Picket, The Chelsea stable, Sam Hildreth, trainer for E. E. Smathers, and William Oliver.

All the above stables will leave New York this week for Narragansett Park Some of the Western horsemen who will have their string of horses at Providence are John Parker, owner of Alex. Frank Foster; R. H. Wright, W. J. Young, Emery J. Morris, James Arthur, R. E. Smith, J. Phillips and Wm. Mulkey.

Work at the new stable, which will accommodate 500 horses, will be completed to-morrow, making the total horse accommodations at the park nearly 1,000. The new clubhouse will also be finished this week. A special car has been engaged by the Buffalo horsemen to transport 300 head of horses to Providence during the week.

Great attention is being given to railroad facilities, with a view to keeping all of sporting men who will attend from Boston.

BALK RULES ARE OFTEN BROKEN

The rules against balking are unusually stringent, so stringent, in fact, that it is almost impossible for the umpire to decide at times when the offense should be committed.

Take two of the nine definitions of the balk, for instance: "Throwing the ball by the pitcher to any base to catch the base runner without stepping directly toward such base in the act of making the throw," and "Making any motion with the arm, shoulder, hip or body the pitcher habitually makes in his method of delivery without immediately delivering the ball to the bat."

Pitchers often offend against the strict construction of these two rules. Few of the left-handers step "directly toward the base" in making the throw to first, and yet many of the twirlers throw to the bag after making any "habitual motion of the arm, shoulders, hip or body." Hardly a game passes that one of these two rules is not violated one or more times, and some of the pitchers are habitual violators of at least one of the rules.

Altrock of the Chicago White Sox, one of the most successful twirlers in the business at holding men on first base, almost always throws to the bag from a position with both hands above his head, exactly the same position which he uses in throwing to the plate. Not half the time does he "step directly toward the base" in making the throw.

The fact is that the rules are so stringent that if they were strictly enforced the pitcher would have to send out advance notices before throwing to first if he wished to be within regulations. The umpire, recognizing this fact, hesitates to call a balk on very evident breaches of regulations.

HIBBARD GETS THE CAPTAINCY

Ledro Hibbard, son of Postmaster Hibbard, has been chosen by the Dorchester High School to be captain of the baseball team for 1906.

Two years ago Hibbard played centre field and began this year in the same position, but was laid up after a few games with a broken collarbone. Captain Hibbard was first in fielding average and fifth in batting, having .304 per cent.

LOU DILLON IS IN GOOD FORM

CLEVELAND, July 11.—After her performance of trotting a mile in 2:07, C. K. G. Billings expressed to H. K. Devereaux his opinion that Lou Dillon (1:58½) will break her record this year.

"I am more than pleased with the mare's showing," remarked Mr. Billings. "She may be sent against the watch next Saturday at the matinee, but I am not positive, but when the proper time comes I do believe that Lou will beat the 1:58½ record."

NICHOLS MAY JOIN DUFFY

ST. LOUIS, July 11.—Charley Nichols, who has just been released by the St. Louis Nationals, has offers from the Pittsburg and Philadelphia clubs. The chances are, however, that he will come to terms with Hugh Duffy.

"I am in perfect shape at present, and intend staying here until the proper offer comes. However, if Duffy meets my terms I will join his forces," stated Nichols.

CLOSE SHAVES ARE PROMISED

A warm diamond battle is anticipated between the Boston barbers and Lynn barbers at Lynn next Thursday afternoon. The Boston nine and rooters will be met on their arrival at the Shoe City by Manager O'Toole and the Lynn barbenders.

Manager O'Toole has engaged a brass band for the occasion and the two teams, reinforced by rooters, will march to the grounds.

PUTTMANN FOR CLAM DIGGERS

Special to the Boston American.

JERSEY CITY, July 11.—Pitcher Ambrose Puttmann of the Highlanders has been loaned to the Providence Eastern League team and has reported here to Jack Dunn, manager of the Clam Diggers. Puttmann joined the Providence team last season and proved to be one of the most effective pitchers in that league. Both Puttmann and Clarkson, who is now with the Jersey City team, will be reunited by New York at the close of the Eastern League season.

COLE'S CARD BEST.

The fourth annual championship tournament of the Press Golf Club of New England opened on the course of the Wollaston Golf Club at Montclair.

The best card was that of H. M. Cole of the Providence News Bureau, who did the eighteen holes in eighty-five. He had a handicap of six, and would really have taken the net prize also, but according to the rules of the club he is obliged to rest content with the gross trophy.

MORRISSEY TO JUMP TEAM

MANCHESTER, N. H., July 11.—"Doc" con Finally Morrissey, who has played with the Manchester baseball team the past four seasons, is packing his trunk with a view to saying goodby to the club. His departure is the result of trouble with Captain Clark last Friday. He is planning to join an independent team, and intends to leave the city next Friday to join the Harrisburg outfit.

ROUSE MAY MEET FORBES

Rouse O'Brien will appear at the Chelsea Club season and will go against Harry Forbes probably, on July 25. Forbes has been heard from at this manager, Harry Gilmore, asked for a match with O'Brien, or will do so in a few days, and the match will be made for next week. But that date had been penciled for Jack Johnson for a match with some heavyweight here and the pair was finally selected.

LOVE is enough. Why should we strive for power?
It brings men only envy and distrust.

Watch Yourself, Lest You Acquire the Loafing Habit

It Will Grow on You Before You Realize It

By Beatrice Fairfax

A GIRL loafer.

That does not sound very pretty, does it? And yet I am afraid there are a good many girls whom the title fits.

In other words, there are girls who spend their time doing absolutely nothing.

Circumstances do not render it necessary for them to earn their living, and so they stay at home and fritter the precious moments away in useless pursuits or idleness.

For time misspent is time wasted.

The girl who helps lighten the cares of housekeeping for her mother is not wasting her time. She is putting it to the best possible use.

But how many of the girls who live at home do help their mothers?

I wonder if a good many of them don't lie in bed in the mornings and let their mothers get up and get breakfast.

And don't you think they also dress up in their best clothes and spend the afternoons enjoying themselves while their mothers stay home and prepare the evening meal?

And when they are home they spend their time reading trashy novels or trimming equally trashy hats.

Now, girls, maybe you don't call that loafing, but I do, and so, I think, would most of your mother friends.

When a girl goes to a party and is late in getting to bed she looks on it as quite proper and natural that she should lie in bed late the next morning, and all the family accepts the fact as a matter of course.

But if the mother is up half the night with an ailing baby neither her lazy daughter nor any other member of the family seems to think it necessary that she should stay in bed and make up her broken sleep.

Perhaps if some of these girls could appreciate the enormous value of time they would not waste it so.

Our lives are made tiny drops in the ocean of time, and we can never, never call back one precious lost minute.

Just think, the world has existed for millions of years and will probably last for many millions more, and out of all those millions the average human being is only allotted three score years and ten in which to live and love and make the best and most of things.

Oh, girls, isn't it wicked to let one second get away from you?

We are supposed to sleep eight hours out of every twenty-four, and that alone uses up 121 days and 16 hours out of every year.

Multiply that by the number of years you have lived and you will realize how little time you can afford to waste.

I want you all to understand that this scolding is not intended for the girls who are earning their own living or for those who are busily occupied with home duties.

It is only directed at those who have no appreciation of the golden hours they are flinging away.

Dear girls, don't allow yourselves to be called by that ugly word "Loafer," and yet you will be if you do not realize how little time you can afford to waste.

If your brothers lay round the house all day, half dressed and doing nothing, they would be called "Loafers," so why not you as well as they?

"Loafing" is a habit that grows on one with fatal rapidity, and unless you want to be held irrevocably by the clothes you must break away from it at once.

HOT WEATHER POINTERS ON KEEPING PROVISIONS

By Grace Elliston

HOT weather brings with it many cares for the housewife, as many eatables are spoiled by the heat unless proper provision is made for their being kept in some cool place.

For those who cannot afford the luxury of an ice box or who live in flats or apartments and have no cellar in which to keep things, it is a good idea to secure a strong packing box that can be made air tight when the cover is closed down.

Put it in the coolest place you have and keep in it all such things as spoil by exposure to the heat and air, the milk, butter, fresh vegetables, uncooked meat or fish or fruit.

A partition should be put in the box, so that the butter and milk may be kept by themselves.

Ice is almost a necessity in Summer, and even a little piece will make the greatest difference in keeping things fresh. Though it seems an expense to buy it, perhaps, in the end money is saved by the provisions being kept from spoiling.

To make the ice last as long as possible wrap it in a small piece of blanket and put it in something so the water can drain off as it melts.

A very good ice box can be made out of an old wash tub. Bore a hole through the bottom and toward the side, then nail blocks of wood across it to raise it just enough from the ground to allow for slipping a pan underneath to catch the water that flows from the ice.

For a very few cents a carpenter will make a cover for you out of good strong boards. If this has two handles on it the ice chest may serve as a stand or table also, because the top can be simply lifted off and put to one side with whatever may be on top left undisturbed.

This special ice chest may be strongly recommended for its cleanliness. It can easily be turned out and washed and the blanket wringing the ice should be rinsed every day, or it will not smell sweet and clean.

In the tub ice box it is difficult to make divisions, so when the milk and butter are put in they should be in air tight jugs or jars, so that they will not become tainted with the taste or odor of the other things kept there.

Fish should be placed away from other eatables, as it has a tendency to impart its flavor to them.

If should have a small piece of ice to itself.

When meat comes from the butcher's, if ice should not be on hand, the fires at least may be kept up and the shining rays of the sun excluded, when the Autumn season opens.

Foolish? Of course. More than that, idiotic.

Nothing graceful about crinoline and a lot of discomfort and awkwardness to contend with, but in spite of all that, it is safe to wager that women will accept the mode and suffer much vexation and mortification in learning to manage the hideous monstrosity which their mothers thought was forever buried in oblivion.

Rhubarb or cabbage leaves spread over meat and changed every day are also a good way to keep it.

In the terrible dog days it is best to scald the milk as soon as it comes.

The scalding is pretty done by setting the milk jug or bottle in a pan of boiling water for a few minutes until a skim begins to form upon it. This keeps far better than raw milk.

When such little things as these are well looked after a great deal is added to the taste of things, as well as in the reduction of one's expenses.

CRINOLINE SKIRTS NOW ON THE WAY ACROSS THE OCEAN

Old-Fashioned Gowns Are Already Seen in London

CRINOLINE is more than an amusing rumor—it is an alarming probability. If you don't believe it, look at these photographs.

The models were not dressed for the occasion. They are actual women, whose likenesses were caught by the camera, at a recent fashionable society function in London.

Their gowns attracted a great deal more admiration than surprise. There were other gowns at that affair whose crinolined dimensions were equally generous, but these were the most fetching in design.

Crinoline has arrived in London. Only the ocean lies between London and New York.

Fashions cross the ocean easily and quickly. Therefore, draw your own conclusions.

An authority says there will be an outburst of crinoline on Fifth avenue in the early Fall.

Boston never lets New York get ahead of her in sartorial efforts. So we may expect to see our pretty and fashionable maids and matrons walking forth in the midst of yards of distended skirts, when the Autumn season opens.

Foolish? Of course. More than that, idiotic.

How to Learn the Art of Swimming In a Single Week

This photograph, posed especially for the BOSTON AMERICAN by Mrs. Agnes Mealey of South Boston, shows the second position of the arms in learning the br. st stroke.

Second Easy Lesson in Series Begun Yesterday

THE second lesson to be learned in swimming is the movement of the legs. In the lesson which was given in yesterday's BOSTON AMERICAN the arm movement was described. At the same time the "scooping" or semi-circle is made with the arms the legs should be moving in unison.

When the hands and arms are in the first position the legs are straight with the knees together. Then the legs are drawn up toward the body and flexed outward. Next kick out with the legs very wide with one on each side. Then draw the legs gradually into the first position.

Much of the difficulty in learning to swim would be overcome if the beginner would always pay attention to directions. Study to do exactly as you are told.

Breathing and confidence are the important factors in swimming. The breathing must be natural and regular through the nose and the beginner must have confidence.

Always the learner should follow the advice of the guards at the beaches. A woman ought not to venture out to the raft when the tide is coming in and get off to come ashore expecting to find the same depth of water as when she went out.

Nor in learning to swim should she ever go out beyond chest-depth in the water.

Don't Ask Another to Pick a Wife for You

By Rev. Albert E. George

QUEER things are happening daily. Of course they are, you say. Yet these queer things are not merely platitudes which we must expect. They make the gray matter work in us all.

A widower down South wrote me a letter a short time ago, in which he made the urgent request that I should find him a wife in Boston. He has read something charming about the women in this city.

"I want," he says, "a nice plump, pretty, honest, truthful, poor girl, from eighteen to thirty years of age, height about five feet and weight from 100 to 150 pounds."

He is a woodsman, and makes a pretty good living. I answered his letter and went to work in search of such a prize. I have not been successful. Everyone approached says:

"Why does he not find some one down where he lives?" "Oh! he's an old fool and is queer."

When I look at his photograph and study his features, he appears to be an honest, open-hearted fellow, and I am persuaded he would make some woman happy in a humble home.

But if a man wants a wife, he should be able to obtain one without much outside help.

There is a knack about getting a wife. Even a widower of forty-eight should find this out. To tell me that he has brown, curly, gray hair, blue-gray eyes and a brown mustache is a good margin to work with.

But women generally, who are matrimonially inclined, do not like descriptions of a prospective husband. They want to see the subject themselves.

Do you blame them? We do not buy horses without seeing them. Why should a second party bargain for a wife? This is queer business.

Now my advice is this. When a man, especially a widower, wants a wife, he should have gumption enough to look around and investigate for himself. If he lacks this, he is not deserving of a partner.

My advice not being successful. Everyone approached says:

"Why does he not find some one down where he lives?" "Oh! he's an old fool and is queer."

SCARLET LIES

By X and Z, Authors of "Married to Mystery"

CHAPTER CXXIII.—Continued

"IF you remember," said Braine, "it was the thing that you said you were sure of being able to prove, and, consequently, I took no action in that matter. Miss Mort was on board, and I understood——"

"But! What's that, you're talking to a woman?"

"None," retorted Braine, laconically, "Neither is it wise to cry over spilt milk. The thing is done. They are engaged. So far no particular harm has been done—certainly nothing that is irreparable. You are not likely to be married yet awhile."

"They will."

Never Be Married,"

said Darch grimly.

"Of course not. Now, what do you propose to do—eh? Tackle Armstrong again when he gets to Boston, or——"

"I'm inclined not to wait for that," replied Sir Percy Darch fiercely. "I've waited long enough as it is."

"You mean that you want to publish the truth of the Gunter affair at once?"

"Yes; let the police know everything. Agony for a warrant on a charge of perjury and conspiracy, and have our dear friend Armstrong arrested when he steps ashore at Fort Southam from his floating palace."

"Well, why not?" Braine's eyes glittered.

"Could you arrange it?"

"Certainly, if you wish. But remember that it means a very serious thing for young Lawrence Gunter."

"Confound Lawrence Gunter!" ejaculated Darch, with an ugly oath. "What is young Gunter to me? It is unfortunate, but——"

"The youth is innocent," said Braine. "Don't forget that. I am sure of it."

"Pshaw! What does that matter? Innocent or guilty, the fact remains that Armstrong perjured himself to get him off."

"Quite so." Braine nodded like a philosophic mandarin.

"I suppose," said Darch, "there would be no difficulty about the evidence?"

"None whatever. I have it all cut and dried." He gave a fat chuckle and shrug of shoulder. "It's up there in that case. You'll see it labelled 'Private case'—evidence of every sort, all ready for immediate use."

"Good! Why shouldn't we start, then? I feel like giving Armstrong a shock when he gets home. Let the country be ringing from end to end with his name. The great Robert Armstrong, the Soap King, the upright, honorable man, exposed as a liar and a perjurer—eh? How about that, Braine?"

"It would certainly be a very satisfactory revenge," answered Fergus Braine, "but you must remember, Mr. Darch, when once the machinery of the criminal law is put in motion there is no stopping it. You'll have to go on."

"Certainly. I don't want to stop it I shall want to go on. What an idea!"

"But to ruin Armstrong?"

"Precisely."

"And then?" Fergus Braine eyed his client closely. You see, Mr. Darch, the charge would probably receive punishment—a term of imprisonment commensurate with the serious nature of his offence."

"Yes, that's just it!" exclaimed Darch eagerly. And his black eyes lit up with the slaister lust of revenge. His lips parted, and revealed his clenched teeth. Just then he looked positively repulsive, so much so that Fergus Braine recoiled from him.

"It would not be as completely satisfactory as you think, Mr. Darch," he said.

"And why not, pray?" asked the financier. "I tell you I want to crush him—crush him down, make him grovel in the dust and cry to me to have pity. I——"

"Prove what I know of Mr. Armstrong," he said. "I do not think he the sort of man to beg for mercy of you or anyone else."

"He, he'll see, Braine—we'll see!"

The man was possessed with a very fiend of hatred and revenge. A sort of fury swept over him; he clenched his fist and struck Mr. Braine's writing table a mighty blow.

"I will break him!" he said angrily—"break him as I said I would!"

"And then?. Would you be satisfied.

"I think so."

"Even without attaining your object—I mean Miss Armstrong?"

"What do you mean?" asked Darch suddenly. "I don't follow you."

"My dear sir," exclaimed Fergus Braine, "do you think that by ruining Armstrong you would make it more possible for you to win Miss Armstrong? Because, if you do, I feel sure that you are very much mistaken. If the father is not the man to humble himself to you, or any one else, he will not unnaturally avenge himself on him, neither is his daughter the woman to marry the man who brings the calamity about."

"Nobody will be likely to want to marry the daughter of a convicted felon," sneered Darch.

"I should be inclined to doubt that, sir, where Miss Armstrong is concerned."

"Ha! so you are turning out in new colors are you? You now pose as Armstrong's advocate—eh?"

"Nothing of the sort, Mr. Darch," protested Braine.

"You Wrong Me.

I am acting solely in your interests. I am genuinely endeavoring to advise you on the best course to take."

"Thank you," said Morley Darch venomously. "But I labor under considerable difficulty in thinking of you as to genuinely acting in anybody's interests but your own. However, that is neither here nor there; let us get to business."

"Everything depends," said Braine, "on whether your principal object is to marry Miss Armstrong."

"It is," said Darch.

"Then," said Braine, "I consider that you are going about it in quite the wrong fashion. If you persist in bringing about Armstrong's ruin, in my opinion, you finally and irrevocably make it impossible for Miss Armstrong to marry you."

"She'll be glad enough to find anyone to marry me then," laughed the man brutally.

"Nonsense! Why, young Captain Menzies would be only too glad to do so."

"You'll see," sneered Darch. "Wait till the world points its finger of scorn at her."

"You have a totally distorted idea of the effect of what you propose doing. You seem to forget that Miss Armstrong will still be very rich and quite independent."

"But it would ruin Seafoam."

"Not necessarily. Why should it? I have no doubt that it will suffer considerably; but in capable hands Seafoam soap ought to triumph. Soap is soap. Armstrong may be in prison, but people must wash themselves."

"It is not a matter to jest about," said Morley Darch angrily. "You know just as well as I do that Armstrong is everything in the business. Take away Armstrong and where is your Seafoam soap? It's a one-man business. It is Armstrong's personality, I tell you."

"It's a good soap," said Braine.

"There are dozens—hundreds of other equally good soaps; but they haven't got an Armstrong behind them to boom them and sell them. Armstrong is a genius."

"You are right in a way," Braine agreed; "but you still forget that, even did you succeed in smashing the great Port Seafoam industry altogether—which you must, as a sensible man, admit to be very highly improbable—the Armstrongs would still be very rich. You don't suppose Armstrong need work another day unless he wanted it."

Morley Darch glared ferociously at Fergus Braine.

"You argue your case very well," he said, with a cynical laugh. "How much have you squeezed out of Armstrong for doing this?"

Fergus Braine gave his client a look of injured indignation.

"That remark, Mr. Darch," he said, "is hardly fair. Have I ever given you cause to be dissatisfied with what I have done for you?"

"Oh, you can adopt that pose of injured innocence, you oily-tongued——"

Old Hypocrite.

but I can see what you're up to! No, you don't gull me quite so easily as that, my friend. I wasn't born yesterday. You have been pretty lucky so far, Mr. Braine; but one day you'll wake up very suddenly to the realization that you cannot successfully run with the hare and hunt with the hounds."

"Mr. Darch!" Fergus Braine's look of protest was almost comic.

"Anyway," said Darch, "my mind is made up. You must allow something for revenge. I'll risk Mary, I'll risk everything, so long as I can get even with Armstrong—curse him!. What's how I feel."

"You are determined?"

"Absolutely."

Fergus Braine meditatively stroked the side of his nose. The position was unexpected. For the moment he did not quite see his way.

"Think it over, Mr. Darch," he said, "I've thought it over till I'm tired," retorted the financier. "I am determined."

"It is a rash step," Braine insisted—"a very rash step."

Darch struck the table again.

"Look here," he said angrily, "are you backing out of it?"

"Hear me, no; why should I?"

"Then shut up, and say no more about it."

TO BE CONTINUED.

Summer Shows at Theatres and Beaches

GOOD THINGS GALORE IN NEW BILL AT KEITH'S

"Root and Komfortable" Keith's is what the actors once again call the popular play house, and he's right. The large audience which last night welcomed the new bill enjoyed the evening's entertainment as hugely as if it were an out-of-door concert to which they were listening on a cool suburban lawn.

The Faderine made over head way discussion of a Summer show at Keith's. The musical menu by this popular orchestra of young women is well selected, and there are a number of surprises among the entire numbers. The soloists this week are the harpist, Miss Williams, and she won a well-earned and insistent demand for an encore, which was gracefully granted.

The rest of the bill is wholesomely and cleverly foolish and summery. Big Harry V. Donnelly—he is once furnished the bulk and dignity of his weight to the team of Donnelly and Girard—presented a one act sketch about a married man who had a falling-out with his wife, cleverly acted by Miss Alice Spencer, and the troubles of the two are laughter-making. The sketch is called Mr. and Mrs. Nagg, and is well written.

Ray L. Royce, once of the legitimate, does some mimicry, Matthews and Ashley present a whirlwind conversational battle with a few songs scattered between times.

There are Dorgeal, handsome and just from Paris, wears pretty gowns and sings a bit. She sings well. Harry B. Lester in a monologue helps one to forget the hot weather, for he tireless, like unto negro vaudeville teams, work hard and earnestly to please. Miss Moses Cook and Clinton are clever marksmen, and their rifle shooting is especially marvelous.

Everybody stayed for the motion pictures last night for they are interesting and funny, and all the while that Hot Weather Hero, the pianist who plays in the dark somewhere, like the pictures are going, played along his string of musical good things that are becoming as truly typical of Keith's as the trip to the engine room, the well known and kindly ushers, and the crowds of children that can be found at Keith's on these holiday afternoons.

JAY HUNT BENEFIT AT BOWDOIN SQUARE

"Because She Loved" was given at the Bowdoin yesterday and will be the bill all the week, except at the Wednesday performances, when Jay Hunt, the general stage director, will be tendered his annual benefit. To-morrow both afternoon and evening, the bill will include the third act of "Monte Cristo," with Charles Miller as Dantes; the second act of "Romeo and Juliet," with Charles Miller and Charlotte Hunt as the lovers; the second act of "Rip Van Winkle," with Jay Hunt as Rip; the second act of "Faust," with Jay Hunt with Mr. Hunt as Siebtehl, and the seventh act of "The Two Orphans," with Mr. Hunt as Pierre, Mr. Miller as Jacques, Miss Hunt as Louise and Adelaide Marshall as Henriette. Next week's play will be "The Queen of the Four."

QUADROON GIRLS AT AUSTIN & STONE'S

This week's show at Austin & Stone's Museum is entirely southern in nature. A company of sweet-voiced quadroon girls and male dancers and singers from the sunny South holds the boards this week. There are thirty of these in the company, which is styled "The Creole Belles." Applause greeted every act and song in the seven presented in the first part, and appeared yesterday. The girls are accomplished singers and rhythmic dancers, well selected for their personal attractiveness.

Features of the first part above presented were the character act of Billy Washington and Bessie Lamont, the fine work of Billy Copes as the preacher in the camp-meeting scene and Lillian and Frank Stewart. Bedford's brass band played when they entered and left the ring. Kreiger, the big smoke Trixie and the other carriers also received big hands at each ball.

Powell's "Mingled Maids," in breezy acts full of fresh singing and dancing, crowded the theatre day and evening.

FIREWORKS AT THE POINT OF PINES

The free display of fireworks at the Point of Pines last night, the first of a series of eight, $1,000 displays, attracted one of the largest crowds this famous resort has seen in years. After the almost unbearable hot weather of the day the cool breezes which always blow across the seagirt neck of land were especially welcome, and the crowd that came from the sweltering city found something in the shore line from the moment they arrived until they went away.

Of course the fireworks display at 9:45 was the great attraction of the evening. A feature was the large number of set pieces. There was a gigantic portrait of President Roosevelt, a funny moving picture, and at least ten other combinations of color and flame. There was a perfect bombardment of rockets and bombs and quite a few absolute novelties in the pyrotechnic line.

The programme in the rustic theatre included Torelli's dog and pony circus; Zara and Stetson, whirlwind baton manipulators; Anderson and Golson, one of the funniest of all coon teams; Ricby W. Craig and his phonophone, and Eckart and Berg, operatic singers. The same programme is given afternoon and evening.

In the afternoon E. L. Stafford made his balloon ascension, which is a daily feature, and the Lynn Cadet Band gave an enjoyable concert afternoon and evening. The free dancing and the free zoo are also attractions.

GOOD PROGRAMME AT NORUMBEGA PARK

Both Sunday and yesterday were ideal days to spend at Norumbega Park and the immense crowds gave evidence of its popularity. There is no pleasanter way of spending a hot day than by taking a ride up and down the river or floating lazily along the shady bank in the rear, or occupying the comfortable seats distributed everywhere through the park, listening to the band concerts which are given daily from 12:30 until 6 o'clock.

Excellent vaudeville programmes are given in the large covered open air theatre, to which the cool breezes from the river have free access.

Yesterday the programme presented included Mme. Seipell and her lions, in a remarkable act. J. Francis Dooley, assisted by Dorothy Bremner and Mabel Marsh, gave a costumed singing and dancing act. Walter and Magill presented a clever little juvenile number. The equilibrists, Zella and Dot, the dog, gave a novel gymnastic act. An eccentric dancing and talking act was given by Udell and Rosen. The Komograph was a pleasing finale to this unusually interesting programme.

4,000 COOLIES FOR THE PANAMA CANAL

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The Panama Canal Commission has announced its intention to import alien contract labor for the work on the Panama Canal. Four thousand Chinese and Japanese coolies and two thousand Italian laborers, to work under a 500-day contract, are to be advertised for in a few days. The commission, in announcing this decision, stated to-day that the experiment of employing two thousand men of each of the nationalities mentioned is for the purpose of testing their relative capacity for work, and also to test the contract method of securing of and handling laborers.

ENJOY 'BROTHER OFFICERS' AT CASTLE SQUARE

The cool and comfortable auditorium of the Castle Square Theatre was well patronized last evening at the performance of Leo Trevor's military comedy, "Brother Officers," by the Castle Square stock company. The play was by no means a great one, as this interesting and popular company has most been staged in Boston for more than two years. The members of the cast are any met the demands of the several characters very successfully, and the performance was greatly enjoyed by the audience. As Lieutenant Hinds, the romantic hero of the play, Howell Hansel gained the favor of the audience by his successful portrayal of this difficult role. Mary Hall, as altoness Royden, displayed her abilities as an actress in this character, as well suited to her charming personality.

A particularly pleasing factor in the success of the performance was that of Katie Johnson, the semi-humorous role of the controller of the pickle market, which was taken by Mary Sanders.

The Robert Hutton of the cast was given strength by William Sorrey, while Lieut. Arnold made a very amatrously and dignified Lady Margaret and Jessie Busley was altogether satisfactory as Colonel Stapleton. The other members of the cast were also exceptionally good in the support they gave the principals.

'KAFOOZELUM' IN 3D WEEK AT TREMONT

The third week of "Kafoozelum" at the Tremont Theatre was witnessed at that theatre last night with a large audience, which found the interior of the theatre at least fifteen degrees cooler than the outer world. Elva Baldwin, elevated from the ranks of the chorus, played for the first time Buster Brown, one of the broadest babies taken to the underground kingdom of Kafoozelum. Miss Baldwin played the part cleverly and well. Dave Lewis and Elsie Fay continued to be the popular pair, and the song hit of the show, "Hiram Greene," received its usual seven or eight encores. "Kafoozelum" will stay at the Tremont only through next week, when it will be followed by another comic opera, "The Geezer of Geck."

BURLESQUE FUN AT PALACE THEATRE

The Palace Theatre presents an entertainment this week that is bright and breezy throughout. The bill includes two amusing burlesques entitled "The Patent Robber Trap" and "The Genuine." The latter is a burlesque on the Virginian, with Frank Graham in the leading role. The full strength of the stock company is introduced in both skits. The echo presented by Mike Scott, clog dancer; the Chamans, singers of Hungarian songs; Mae Perry, soprano; Perry and Burns, comedy sketch pair, and Grace Forrest Burke and Edna Urline, acrobatic dancers, are good and deserve the entertainment yesterday, in spite of the hot weather.

ATTRACTIONS NOW AT PARAGON PARK

A sudden rain need have no terrors for those who visit Paragon Park on Sunday, when there were at least 12,000 persons at the Park, a shower came with nearly a moment's notice, and in a few seconds the rain fell in torrents and then it was clear again. A moment before the rain started the esplanade was black with people. A second later, when the rain was falling, there was not a soul in sight. Everybody had found shelter.

Speedy is the talk of the park this week. Speedy is the name of the human shot from the top of a ladder 125 feet high into a tank of water thirty-five inches deep. No one has ever tried to imitate Speedy and his act is unique. Another great act is offered by Harlow and Delno, aerial bicyclists. The Zeno, Jordan, Zeno trope continue to give their remarkable exhibition of aerial trapeze work. The Maitland Band is giving great satisfaction under Emil F. Blaney, "the man who sings to beat the band." is singing a new song of his own composition.

There seems to be an erroneous impression abroad that it requires a great deal of money to see Paragon Park. As a matter of fact, the admission fee, ten cents, entitles one to a great deal of the best work by Pierce and Maizes, Conversational and singing artists describe Jerry and Penny, two men of entertaining qualities. Cook, Hall and Johnson, in a refined musical act win much applause both by the musical and comedy features of their performance, and a comedy juggling act is contributed by Pete, Wilson and Rozil. The program closes with the moving pictures in the komograph.

TO PROVINCETOWN ACROSS THE BAY

The daily excursions to the tip of Cape Cod seem to be a greater attraction to the traveling public this season than ever. Day after day the decks of the steamer Cape Cod are comfortably filled with tourists, many of whom, not content with indulging in the pleasures of this eight-hour sailing four hours each way, declare they have made the trip time and again. The boat leaves at 9 o'clock each day, Sundays at 9:30, and arrives back in Boston in the evening at about 6:30.

BASS POINT TRIP AN ATTRACTIVE ONE

The trip to Bass Point, Nahant, is one of the pleasantest offered Summer recreation seekers. The sail down and back is refreshing and attractive and there are many pleasing features at the Point. The new dance hall is proving popular. The programme in the open air theatre this week includes Phil Morton, the Irish comedian; Dawson and Ramon, in a travesty sketch; Chefalo, the clever Italian magician; McAvoy and Hughes, in comedy boxing and bag punching, and Miss Helen, comedienne.

SEAT SALE FOR 'THE PEARL AND PUMPKIN'

The seat sale for the New England spectacle, "The Pearl and the Pumpkin," which will have its first presentation on any stage at the Colonial Theatre on Monday evening of next week, will begin Thursday at 8 a. m. The box office will be kept open daily from 8 a. m., till 6 p. m., up to the time of the first performance. The premiere of the elaborate spectacle promises to be one of the most brilliant mid-summer openings in Boston for years, and a large number of orders for seats have already been received from prominent Bostonians now at their Summer homes. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week 1,000 "Pearl and the Pumpkin" booklets illustrated in colors by the famous artist, W. W. Denslow, will be presented to the first 1,000 people who call for them at the box office.

FOUGHT FISH WITH AN AXE

Captain H. P. Powell, of Nahant, brought in the biggest horse mackerel ever landed at T wharf. It was ten feet long and weighed 800 pounds, and was caught only after a fierce struggle. Four men in a dory got after him and hurried with him for some time before a well-directed blow of an axe split his head open and put a stop to the fight. An Atlantic avenue dealer bought it for 4 cents a pound.

WANTS TO BE RID OF COAL BLACK BABY

Carrying a cute, coal black baby in her arms, Mrs. Mason of Wellesley, called at Police headquarters and asked what she should do with it. She said it was the child of a colored maid, Helen Wells, who had left with her because she had been discharged. The sergeant at the desk looked sympathetic and told Mrs. Mason the Boston police had no jurisdiction. She went back to Wellesley, vowing that she will not keep the child.

Making a Presidential Candidate of a Corporation Lawyer

It's a Process That Ought to Interest the American Citizen—If Anything Except His Pocket CAN Interest Him

Elihu Root is the new Secretary of State.

You know some things about Mr. Root. He was a great corporation lawyer when made Secretary of War some time ago. As corporation lawyer his business was to tell the trusts how they could cheat the law and the people.

He wouldn't deny that himself—other lawyers would laugh at him if he did.

Before he became a great corporation lawyer Mr. Root was the lawyer for Tweed. His experience in defending Tweed fitted him excellently for his work as defender of the trusts and other corporations.

He resigned his place as Secretary of War because he wanted to go back to work as the professional law-evader of the trusts. There is a great deal more money in telling the trusts how to evade the law than there is in working for the people of the United States.

The moment Mr. Root left the War Office he took a job with the Beef Trust. He took their money and, in return, explained to them how they could thwart the feeble efforts of the people to destroy a criminal combination that gave rotten beef to soldiers and dear meat to the public generally.

The money of the corporations flowed in to Mr. Root with wonderful speed as soon as he announced that he was ready to receive a few more bundles of it.

In the first place, Root is a very cunning lawyer. No fox knows more about the paths and the holes in his neighborhood than Root knows about dodging the law and helping big corporations to steal.

Then, remember, that Root was talked about as Republican candidate for Governor of New York State. The trusts like to pay their money to a man who may be Governor of a big State.

And Root is Mr. Roosevelt's intimate friend and adviser.

The trusts gladly pay money to the intimate friend and adviser of a President who might actually do something to the trusts in addition to talking about doing something.

And Root, the great corporation lawyer, is of the material out of which Supreme Court Judges and United States Attorneys-General are made.

Far-seeing trusts gladly give big fees to lawyers whom they may meet later upon the Supreme Court bench or in the Attorney-General's office.

Mr. Root made plenty of money as soon as he gave up, temporarily, working for the people. His retainers alone amounted to $200,000 a year—that amount to be paid him in case he did nothing at all—the amounts paid him when he actually went to court would be very much greater.

In spite of this, Mr. Root has dropped the trusts once more and has gone back to work "for the people." He has been made Secretary of State.

And, what is more important, HE HAS BEEN PROMISED THE REPUBLICAN NOMINATION FOR PRESIDENT.

We are told that he hesitated to drop his big corporation fees and become Secretary of State. He consented to do so finally on the condition that the influence of Mr. Roosevelt should get him the Republican nomination in 1908.

We have no doubt that Mr. Root, as Secretary of State, will honestly do his best for the people and try not to laugh as he pockets their wretched little salary of $8,000 a year.

He knows that at any moment he can hop out of the Secretary of State's office, as he hopped out of the Secretary of War's office, and begin his fat trust pickings once more—with fees all the bigger because he is an ex-Secretary of State.

Mr. Root will try to be honest with the people as Secretary of State. But it is hardly in human nature to think that he will fail to do what he can, also, for the trusts, who have got so many of their dollars in his pockets.

Rockefeller has a fight with Russia over the world's oil monopoly—the Secretary of State will be able to help him in that.

Havemeyer has trouble with Russia over the sugar business—he will be glad to see a trust attorney in the Secretary of State's office.

The Steel Trust needs help all over—Root has had some very big Steel Trust fees.

The Tobacco Trust will need him in Cuba.

He will be able to remember "old friends" on a big scale. For our international relations are chiefly business relations. And the Secretary of State controls our international relations as the trusts control our business.

---

Mind you, we believe that Mr. Root is a conscientious man—as corporation lawyers go.

But whether it is possible for a man to devote his life and his talent to breaking down the laws made by the people and at the same time keep his conscience and his patriotism in good working order we don't know.

Root is probably as good and as honest as any of the men who earn their living by making a republican government ridiculous and by helping money to control the laws.

At the worst, it isn't as bad to have a trust attorney in the office of Secretary of State as it is to have such an attorney on the bench, or in the Attorney-General's office, deciding cases in which the people appear against the trusts that have made the judge or Attorney-General a rich man.

Root's selection as Secretary of State, with the promise that he shall be made President if the Republicans win, suggests this question:

What do the people think of the present training school for judges, Cabinet officers and other public officials?

Are the law-breaking TRUSTS any better than law-breaking BURGLARS?

Does the mere fact that a man is a lawyer justify him in selling his brains to any lawbreaker that will pay him a big fee?

The nation would be outraged at the thought of filling the great judicial and executive offices with the pals and assistants of burglars.

Why does it take so easily the giving of the big offices to men who owe their fortunes and their success to law-breaking corporations?

Is it any wonder that the statute book is a joke to a trust owner, when he knows that, at the critical moment, he will find one of his ex-lawyers on the bench to judge him, and another of his ex-lawyers, representing the people, to prosecute him?

---

P. S.—A collection of geese have done a good deal of talking about the "tainted money" of John D. Rockefeller.

In our humble opinion, the money in the pocket of a corporation lawyer who has sold his brains to a gang of thieves is more seriously "tainted" than any money Rockefeller ever had.

Rockefeller, at least, sandbags the people and takes their money away from them in an open way. AND HE STICKS TO HIS SANDBAGGING TRADE.

He doesn't help big thieves to rob the people, taking a paltry percentage of the profits, and he doesn't climb up on the bench, or look for other public office, with his pockets stuffed full of corporation fees.

1—POMPOUS STRANGER—Mr. Mark, the Steamboat Company has tendered our Council the privilege of naming their new mammoth palatial steamer. We have also the power to name the lady who will christen the beautiful boat.

2—POMPOUS STRANGER—At a meeting of the Council last evening resolutions were passed, of which here is an engrossed copy, that the boat be named E. Z. Mark, and also, that Mrs. Mark be asked to honor our community by christening the vessel.
MR. E. Z.—SIR. This honor! This double honor! In the name of Mrs. Mark and of myself I accept.

3—POMPOUS STRANGER—Thank you, Mr. Mark. But I must bid you good day, as I must hustle. We are going to present the boat with a set of silver plate and there is yet two hundred dollars to be raised, and I——
MR. E. Z.—Go no further, my good friend; go no further. Here is my subscription of two hundred dollars. By Jove, sir, this honor is worth the ransom of a king.

4—MRS. MARK (on her return)—What's this? Engraved resolutions? Council? Name boat E. Z. Mark? Me christen it? Give two hundred toward silver plate? E. Z., you are absolutely dippy. Don't you know that the boat is going to be named after the State and that the Steamboat Company's president's daughter is going to christen her? Don't you know that there is no such thing as Council in this town? Oh, E. Z., you are, you are, you ARE!

Alan Dale Describes a First Night in Rome

By Alan Dale

ROME, Italy, July 1—It is easy, when in Rome, to do as the Romans do. In fact, you are forced to it, and if you feel an inclination a superior quality, than the average to do anything else, you give it up after a feeble effort or so. With my own preconceived ideas of what a "first night" should be, I went to the Teatro Quirino, where the first performance of a "lyric drama," called "La Figlia di Jorio," occurred last night. The Teatro Quirino is rather a minor theatre, and tourists rarely visit it—which fact recommended itself to me enormously, for I think the tourists in Italy are quite as irritating as the fleas, and you are not allowed to poison them.

To buy a seat you have to get two tickets. One, called the "ingresso," admits you into the building; the other gives you a seating place, wherever you select it. This is a bit hard on the theater. He selects, let us say, a "poltrone" for three lire (sixty cents) and discovers that he has to pay five, the "ingresso" costing two. Exactly why they can't add it up for you and give you one nice, clean ticket, all in a lump, I don't know, though it is said that the "ingresso" goes to the house and the price of the seat to the company. You do as the Romans do, and you don't worry.

The tickets amused me, as they took place on tissue paper. Usually the box office lunatic snips them off for you with a pair of scissors. Rome is very nice, but it isn't practical, and it isn't in a hurry. Everything is slow, and what we should call provincial. The Teatro Quirino itself is a debilitated looking place, with incandescent lights, and white and red decorations. Viewing the gorgeous old ruins in the antique part of this city, one is struck with the ferry-like qualities of modern Rome. It certainly declined and fell—with a thud.

It was an odd-looking first night audience, but a very "human" one. Everybody did as he liked, and looked as he liked, and said what he liked. The men kept on their hats until the curtain rose; the women steadily maintained theirs throughout the performance, and I regret to say that the fashionable monuments that New Yorkers love are popular with the Romans. Alas! Feminine human nature differs so little, and its hats are so big!

But you can imagine my surprise when, just as the opera began, the men pulled out their cigarette- and cigars and lighted them! I fished up some very vile Italian—really criminal Italian—and asked my neighbor if I dared to fume. I love to fume. He showed me a cigarette a mile long, looking like brown asparagus, gave a dental smile, said "Si, signor," and lighted it. Never had I seen this done as the Romans do more joyously. Throughout the performance of "Figlia di Jorio," with its highly "cultured" music, I smoked like a furnace.

Some of the seats were so primitively cushioned that New Yorkers would hardly credit it. Upstairs plain rush-bottomed chairs were softened by what looked like dirty pillow cases. A pillow case on a chair would be strange enough, but a dirty one gave it an unpleasant invitation. There were old women, and weird old men, in bunches of soldiers and a few better dressed people in the boxes. But my cook in New York—bless her heart!—wears finer clothes, of a better cut and interested in other features. I imagine that they don't "paper" houses very much in Rome, for the "poltrone" (orchestra seats) only were filled. New York managers would have had a fit at such a sparsely settled audience. They would have sent nets out into the street, and have dragged in an audience that "completely filled the house," so that the reporters could use their favorite phrase, "packed from pit to dome."

How different this all was! The people lounged and lazed about. There was not an air, or a frill, or a ceremony within hailing distance. Formality was dead as a doornail. Evening dress was a rarity. In Rome it is a case of go as you please, and nobody cares. The anxieties and expenses of theatre-going in Paris, London and New York were all absent. It was inexpensive and informal. My seat cost me eighty cents. I had a red cushion, on a tiny chair, in the first row of a box, and I was monarch of all I surveyed. On the tissue-paper programme were no advertisements, but just a bare and unvarnished record of the play and the cast.

The Teatro Quirino, like all the Roman playhouses, is a repertoire theatre, playing opera at easy rates. "La Figlia di Jorio," the tragic theme used by D'Annunzio in one of his much discussed plays, was set to music by the "Maestro" Guglielmo Brancs, and though new to Rome, had been produced previously in Cremona, during the carnival of 1907. It is not at all necessary to rehearse the story, which isn't pretty, but somewhat "violent." Violent stories are always selected for operatic use, though I should imagine that music might serve better purposes. But, then, I'm not a musical critic, thank goodness, and don't have to bother myself in the musical critics' muddy pond.

The audience was intelligently enthusiastic. That is to say, they applauded what they liked, and not what a clique liked. Any attempt at indiscriminate applause was hissed down. In Italy the claque is a great feature of all entertainments. It is never lacking. Last night, it occurred occasionally when there was an evident effort at spurious appreciation. I like that feature of the Italian theatres immensely. It is an artistic help to enjoyment. The pernicious, death-dealing "claque" of New York sanctions is absolutely unknown here.

It was midnight before the "Figlia di Jorio" had completed its three acts. The impression it made upon the Romans was quite favorable, but as it was merely added to an expensive repertoire, it caused no excitement. It was staged in a way that would have thrown us into spasms of indignation—mumpy, musty, dusty scenery prevailed. Yet it was musical drama, and it was worth seeing and hearing.

His Boy

By James J. Montague

THINK he'll rassle through it, Doc? Speak out, don't be scared
T' tell me all the wust of it,
Reckon I'm prepared.

No! Don't tell me—not just yet—
Guess I'd druther you
Would break it kind o' gentle like
Ef he won't pull through.

Don't seem more'n a week ago
Hardly, me an' him
Went down to the beach one day
T' learn him how t' swim.

He dives in, plumb out o' sight,
Give me sech a skeer,
Till I found he knowed, all time,
Learned hisself, last year.

Just played hookey, little cuss;
Guess I maybe should
Of took him right across my knees
An' giv' it to him good.

But when he looks at me an' smiles,
An' says, "Dad, ain't I smart?"
I couldn't lay a hand on him,
Just didn't have the heart.

I s'pose I've been too soft that way,
I s'pose—so's anyhow
With him a lyin' sick in there
I'm glad I didn't—now.

I've come near trouncin' him a lot
For playin' things on me.
It makes me sort o' shuddery
To think about it? Gee!

Dipthery is it that he's took?
Some children has a show
To get well even out o' that;
You think he hasn't? No?

He has! he's goin' to live! Say, Doc,
I might of stood the wust
Dry-eyed, but I'm so tickled now
I've got t' cry or bust!
